Jr. - Sr. Prom Set For Lilbourn

LILBOURN: "Tropical Island" has been selected as the theme for this year's Junior-Senior Prom to be held May 1

Reapportionment May Be Settled By A Computer

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri's thorniest legislative problem -- reapprotionment of its House of Representatives - may be solved with a slide-rule.

At least this is the hope of Rep. Earl Bollinger, D-Madison County.

Bollinger explained his plan for a "weighted vote" Tuesday night before a legislative committee.

One of a number of plans advanced to meet the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote decision, Bollinger's proposal would maintain the present number of representative districts, but give the representative a fractional vote depending on the number of constituents.

For example, a representative from sparsely populated Worth County would have 2-16ths of a vote. A district representative from St. Louis would have 15 1/2 votes.

An alternative means of calculating the weight of the vote would give the Worth County representative one vote. The St. Louis legislator would have 15 1/2 votes.

Under the sixteenth systems, the House would have a total tally of 2607 -16 - or 162 15-16 votes. The other system would yield a total of 1303 1/2 votes.

Bollinger siad that even though the plan is complicated, it would preserve the identity of rural counties. He said he is opposed to grouping several counties in one district.

Despite the levity the measure has triggered, Bollinger said he introduced it and will support it sincerely.

Also posed was the problem of tabulating the votes in the House. Bollinger said a computer would have to be installed on the electronic board in the House. It would do away with voice votes, he admitted.

Also discussed by the committee was a "back-stop" bill" to set up a system for electing representatives at large if no reapportionment measure passes this session and an at large election is ordered by the courts.

Offered by Rep. R. J. Bus; King, R-St. Louis County, the measure calls for Democratic and Republican conventions to nominate 108 candidates for the House.

The 108-candidate restriction would protect the minority party from a clean sweep in an at-large election.

Rep. Alfred A. Speer, R-St. Louis County, who presented the bill for King, said it would reduce the "unbelievable chaos" which might occur if an at-large election were necessary.

It was patterned after a system used in Illinois, he said.

The House Agriculture Committee revived and approved a bill to prohibit open range in the few remaining counties where it still exists.

The bill was defeated by a narrow margin a week ago.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Wednesday, April 7 is Bluebeard's Wedding Anniversary.

To the man on the street, the initials "M. . S" can stand for many things: a manuscript, a master of science, a master in surgery. To an estimated 50,000 of our fellow Americans, though, stricken and disabled in the years between 20 and 40, the initials MS stand for just one thing. . . multiple sclerosis, a disabling disease of the brain and spinal cord, known as the great crippler of young adults.

These young men and women, mothers and fathers, husbands and wives, face a future filled with the burdens the MS-imposed chronic disability brings: a future marked by increased inability to work, to play, to enjoy those pleasures of young adulthood which most of us take completely for granted.

And what of their families?. . . husbands financially devastated by a wife's need for special, 'round-the-clock nursing service. . . wives who must turn breadwinner simply to provide life's bare necessities . . . children who must -- do -- assume the responsibilities of the adult world long before their time. If there are about a half-million actual victims of MS and related diseases, then, by today's population figures alone, there are more than two-and-a-half million Americans either directly or indirectly afflicted with multiple sclerosis.

Cause, cure and prevention for MS remain unknown. Scientists do, however, know what happens when MS strikes. Briefly, and in layman's terms, multiple sclerosis attacks the substance which protects nerve fibers in the brain and spinal cord. Patches of this substance break down and seem to disappear into the surrounding tissue. Scar tissue plaques form over the denuded nerve fibers. During the process nerve message impulses are shorted out, distorted, sometimes even blocked. Functions of seeing, walking, speaking, movement and balance are affected. Total disability can be the result.

No one disputes the fact that multiple sclerosis must be conquered, and soon, if succeeding generations are to be spared its physical and emotional torment. Last year, President Lyndon Johnson himself inaugurated the campaign against MS with these words: "Multiple sclerosis is a crippler and we cannot rest in this country until we have conquered it." Wonderful words for a noteworthy cause.

It remains, however, for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and its chapters to assume the total task of conquest over MS. The only national voluntary health agency concerned with the whole problem of MS, the Society has spent nearly sixty cents out of every dollar received at national headquarters for its research and scientific programs. Since its inception in 1946, the Society has spent more than four-and-a-half million dollars on research, has provided research fellowship grants to swell the ranks of researchers and educators.

Now the goal is in sight. At last, researchers are convinced MS will be conquered sometime in the not-to-distant future, perhaps in all of our lifetimes. That will be a happy day, indeed. But there's no value to us -- to you or me -- in our sitting back simply to let that happen. Since the Society has undertaken to conquer MS and has dedicated that victory to all of us, then all of must make ourselves worthy of that dedication and that victory. We must support the Society this year as never before either with money or our time, to share the cause, the fight, the victory over multiple sclerosis -- the great crippler of young adults.

A PROFIT VENTURE

A wise man once said that advertising is not a social venture. He then went on to point out that it was a "profit venture."

How right.

Advertisers should never allow friendship to eat into their advertising program.

Actually, there is nothing new about the idea the man expressed. Like gospel, however, it needs to be said every once in a while to keep merchants reminded of the basic fact that they should not spend advertising money to entertain the public, please friends, hear their daughter play the piano or help the aid society.

Donations may be necessary from time to time but they are not advertising.

Whenever you advertise, advertise to make a profit.

'Tis April and we hear proud trumpets sound and bugles blow. Nature's feathered orchestras proclaim the resurrection of sodden earth. Hibernating beasts shake off their winter lethargy. Joy reigns and Spring is here.

Rustic figures plow for the next harvest and man builds and plans for better days. The pessimists are put to rout and the Sun rises over a hopeful humanity.

All of the allegorities and beatitudes of Spring seem to shine more brilliantly each year. The vernal chorus of man and Nature drown the notes of sadness and defeat.

Although the Congress is being told that the nation's businessmen are opposed to any type of Federal aid to education, there is some doubt as to just what businessmen are opposed.

Last session of the Congress the nationwide membership of the National Federation of Independent Business voted on a bill introduced by Rep. William Dorn (South Carolina) which would have returned to the states for use in their schools only 5% of the Federal tax collections.

Even though the independent business proprietors were told that this would reach a total of about $5 billion, 63% voted in favor, with 31% opposed and 6% undecided.

This bill, if passed, would provide more money for education than current bills before the Congress. Thus, there seems to be a majority support among businessmen for a type of Federal aid to education that gives the states the money with no control over curriculum or instruction methods from the Federal government.

In view of this voted attitude by the independent businessmen, expressed by individually signed ballots, if there is any segment of businessmen opposing Federal aid to education, this could illustrate one of the areas in which there are apparently irreconcilable differences between the viewpoints of the independent small business proprietor and the management of the nation's larger corporate complexes.

Historically the independent businessman has been in the forefront of the effort to supply adequate education in his community, often because he is also a parent. Corporate officers, on the other hand, situated in commercial capitals, are more remote from the scene and perhaps only look upon education as a means of training the technological skills used in their operations.

However, largely overlooked in the entire discussion of education needs and what role Federal funds should be used to participate in them is the fact that the Federal government is currently already spending about $2-1/2 billion on education.

The impact of this expenditure is perhaps minimized by the fact that this money total involves some 42 departments, agencies and bureaus of the Federal government, including such diverse units as the Department of Agriculture, State department, the foreign aid agency, and the U. S. Information agency.

This was brought up in an exhaustive report issued on the subject in 1963 by Rep. Edith Green (Oregon.)

In her report she states, "In two, and only two, agencies of the Federal government, education is the agency's primary concern. These are the Office of Education, founded in 1867, and now a division of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the National Science Foundation, established in 1950 as an independent agency 'to develop and encourage basic research and education in the sciences'.

Congresswoman Green also pointed out that some 13 Senate Committees and 19 committees in the House are involved in educational matters, commenting "the diffused jurisdiction over education legislation leads to some inconsistencies and overlapping".

She points out that in the 87th Congress general scholarship legislation was considered by the Committee on Education and Labor, but scholarships for veterans came under the Veterans Committee, for medical students and nurses under the Commerce Committee and three other committees were also involved in this scholarship matter.

She also pointed out that the school lunch and milk program are administered by the Department of Agriculture, but in the House the school lunch program is under the jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee, while the school milk program is under the Agriculture Committee.

With some degree of understatement, Rep. Green wrote, "The diffusion of responsibility for educational programs in the Congress makes it difficult for any one committee, subcommittee, or individual member to ascertain the overall achievements of the government's existing programs, or the overall affects of proposals for changes in them."

Obviously, with so many hands in the funds, there must be overlapping and wastage. The administrative costs of 42 different departments are bound to be higher than those of a single agency. Thus there seems to be a substantial question of how much of the more than $2 billion already being spent filters down to the students, and how much is retained for duplicating administrative costs.

The voting of the independent businessmen shows that they favor good schools, yet other votes show them also strongly in favor of economy in government. It would appear that both objectives can be attained in this case by government making a concerted effort.

Next to locking the doors and shutting off the telephone, the quickest way to privacy and solitude in this modern urban world is to take a walk.

An automobile offers a kind of privacy but the driver must be so alert to traffic hazards that a joyride is no longer relaxing.

In walking, particularly on a Sunday or holiday, you are usually completely alone. Few walk. The autos pile up at crossings, headed one knows not where, but presumably as far away from home as their drivers can get.

The walker enjoys an exclusiveness equal to that conferred on royalty in ancient days, a privilege valued by few in a democracy, alas.

The guests caught 1,894 bluefish, 77 tuna, 134 bonito, 55 albacore, 6 skipjack, 7 dolphin, 7 amberjack, 1 sea bass, 2 fluke, for a total of 2,183.

In exploring the moon or trying to get there we are going to spend at least a million times as much as we have spent in all of our years of study of the ocean floor. We know more about the heavens above us than the earth beneath our feet -- which we have barely penetrated the topsoil. I wonder if this is so because man has a more compelling urge to look outward rather than inward.

Did you ever try to figure out the mechanics of walking that allow you to walk along a curve? I have often studied my own movements when walking a curved line to see what my feet and legs are doing to so change my course in response to my brain's orders. I haven't found the answers.

PAY-DAY FOR THE JOBLESS

Administration ears-to-the-ground are hearing welcome applause from across the nation in anticipation of the cuts in wartime excise taxes on "luxuries" that the President has promised.

It's been a long time since V-J Day and citizens have long taken a dim view of taxes designed to put a damper on sales and production and release workers for the war effort. Their continuance in the face of wide unemployment is insupportable when repeal would give the whole economy the fresh impetus needed to take up the slack -- and offset through business and personal incomes the immediate revenue losses.

There should be no question of WHICH of these nuisance taxes to repeal. ALL should go -- as a matter of justice and equity as well as economics. Take automobiles, for instance, the most widely used form of transportation of people. The special wartime excise taxes on other forms of personal transportation have been eliminated or reduced, but buyers of passenger cars are still paying a hidden excise tax averaging $225 on essential equipment that ceased being a luxury about the end of World War I.

Repeal of the auto excise tax would provide the greatest stimulus to sustained economic growth of any prospective cut. In spurring increased buying of both new and used cars it would increase employment directly in the industries involved in automotive production and indirectly in the countless others serving the users of automobiles -- a total of nearly 800,000 concerns in all.

Repeal would, in a year of 7.5 million production, add $1.7 billion of spendable money to the pants pockets of American consumers. This, certainly, is the sort of a shot-in-the-arm the President contemplated in his proposal for excise tax relief. The motor vehicle industry accounts for 15 per cent of our Gross National Product, employs ten million workers. In 1963, it used 22 per cent of our steel, 61 per cent of all rubber, 38 per cent of all zinc, 14 per cent of all aluminum and 50 per cent of all lead! It is a mighty supporter of the nation's industrial base.

Word that Congress was considering such repeal would, however, unless special precautions are taken, cause widespread deferment in buying. To avoid such a strain on the economy, any such announcement should include assurance that any tax cut will be retroactive to that date. Refunds to purchasers during the interim might be some burden on manufacturers and dealers, but infinitely preferable to a sales "holiday."

Gentlemen of the Congress, the nation is waiting.!

WORTH OF THE DOLLAR

Draining away of the gold that supports our dollar is in the news again.

More and more of our foreign creditors are turning their holdings into gold instead of dollars, forcing us to weaken at a steady and ominous rate the foundation of the value of our currency. The latest step in the process has been to make available to foreign creditors all the gold reserves that have been held in support of the value of our bank deposits.

A desperate search for remedies to this problem is underway in Washington. There is talk of measures never before taken in free America --drastic limitations on foreign investment, even a "headtax" of $100 or more on every American who leaves the country to travel abroad.

Spending by American tourists outside the country, against which this proposal to destroy more of our personal liberty is aimed, totals about $2 billion a year. But our government takes nearly twice that amount each year from tax money for a single program of spending abroad. That program is foreign aid.

Foreign aid is the greatest single source of our imbalance of payments. Each year some $3 1/2 billion of "free gifts" flow from our shores to nearly every other nation in the world. No wonder the dollar is beginning to show the strain.

Yet this is one "sacred cow" that no plan for ending the gold drain touches. Instead, apparently, the freedom of our own people to travel will be sacrificed first. HLH

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(EDITOR'S NOTE -- Drew Pearson continues his report from Moscow on the new turn in American - Soviet relations.)

MOSCOW -- Soon after arriving in Moscow I found that you have to be careful about seeing old friends -- unless you want to get them fired. There remains a large reservoir of goodwill on the part of the Russian people toward the American people. But in official circles it doesn't pay to show it.

Furthermore if you are an American it doesn't pay to put Russian friends and acquaintances in jeopardy. The situation in Moscow is not unlike that which existed in Washington in the heyday of Joe McCarthy when State Department officials were afraid of recommending anything except a hard line toward the Soviet for fear of failing promotion or even being fired.

In Moscow today you don't talk to friends except in crowded restaurants where you can't be bugged or in automobiles or theatre lobbies or museums.

This is not true with members of the Central Committee or top officials who are secure in their positions. But it is true of important but lower-level officials hitherto very friendly to Americans.

Basic reason for this is a split inside the Kremlin over friendly relations with the United States, plus the American bombing of North Viet Nam.

FOR AND AGAINST USA

The Kremlin split was led by Mikhail Suslov on the anti-American side and by Nikita Khrushchev on the pro-American side. It was Suslov who led the move to oust Khrhshchev and worked backstage to roll up the votes against him in both the Presidium and the Central Committee. His ouster strengthened the hand of Suslov, long bitter against the United States.

Suslov's hand was strengthened much more, however, when President Johnson listened to a small group of Pentagon - White House advisers and launched his policy of bombing North Viet Nam. This, Suslov argued, justified his contention that you can't trust Americans, that coexistence with the United States is a sham and a delusion.

In the Presidium, Suslov is in charge of the Department of Agitation and Propaganda. Since the North Viet Nam bombing, additional agencies have been transferred to him, his authority has been strengthened, and one of his allies, Dmitry Ustinov, has been moved up to alternate membership in the powerful Presidium and appointed to the Central Committee Secretariat which controls the Communist party.

This is most significant. For Ustinov is Minister of Armaments. And his rise in power almost certainly means a military buildup and the scrapping of the gradual arms reduction which President Johnson has worked out with Khrushchev so successfully all during 1964.

Khrushchev had followed the "more - bang - for-a-buck" policy of President Eisenhower of concentrating on missiles, curtailing artillery, big land armies, and expensive military hardware. The Red Army, whose artillery is the finest in the world, has objected. But with Khrushchev in power they lost the argument.

Today, with American - hater Suslov tipping the balance of power inside the Kremlin and with Minister of Armaments Ustinov elevated to the Presidium, the Red Army is in a position to resume the arms race. The Marshals have argued that American striking power is now four to Russia's three, and they are determined to catch up.

In Russia there exists the same kind of liaison between the Army and Munitions Manufacturers as President Eisenhower warned against in the United States. In this country, defense contractors, though private, enjoy huge government subsidies and hire retired Generals and Admirals. In the Soviet, the Munition factories are government - owned, but each factory manager is ambitious to push his own plant, and the liaison between the military and the manufacturer is just as close as in the USA.

B AND K ARE JITTERY

What has handicapped the pro-American faction in the Kremlin is the fact that the North Viet Nam bombing came when the new Kremlin leaders, Breshev and Kosygin, are new, inexperienced and unsure of themselves.

Breshnev, head of the Communist party, and more important of the two, is charming, outgoing, a good speaker. He does not have Khrushchev's homey sense of humor or down-to-earth political techniques. But he is effective.

Kosygin, trained as a factory manager, is colorless, a poor speaker, unimaginative, but efficient. The two counterbalance each other, in time might make an excellent team

They have consistently advocated Khrushchev's line of coexistence. And they went just as far as Khrushchev in pushing gradual arms reduction. Last December they instructed Ambassador Dobrynin in Washington to go to the White House and ask whether President Johnson planned to trim his arms budget. The White House replied in the affirmative and gave some figures, warning that the budget would actually be trimmed more than appeared on the surface, because extra money would be spent for increased officers' salaries.

Kosygin then informed the Supreme Soviet that the United States was cutting its arms budget, therefore he proposed a similar cut.

This cooperation has now been scrapped, thanks almost entirely to our policy in Viet Nam and the bitter barrage from Red China, rubbing it home on Moscow that coexistence doesn't work, you can't trust the United States.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals today is having to listen to someone who has given up a bad habit.

Naturally, if you have sworn off sniffing glue, drinking martinis, or chain-smoking cigarettes, you must make your withdrawal pangs public.

The problem in social situations is to grab the conversation at the start. If you don't brag about the bad habit you're throttling, the other fellow will dire tales of his struggles.

When you have only a single bad habit and give it up utterly, it is usually replaced by another bad habit. This is known as Boyle's Law.

For example:

The two-bottle a day bourbon aficionado remains as shaky as ever, because he gets caffeine nerves from drinking 20 cups of coffee daily.

The compulsive smoker becomes a compulsive eater.

The compulsive eater becomes a compulsive pill swalloer.

And all become compulsive talkers.

If you are restricted to one vice, perhaps it would be wiser to surrender it piecemeal. Mark Twain, an inveterate cigar man who lived into his 70s said he never had any trouble giving up smoking: "I've done it a thousand times."

An even better way, probably, is to acquire a number of objectionable habits and conquer them one day at a time. Here is a suggested schedule:

Monday — give up smoking.

Tuesday — no drinking.

Wednesday — give up poverty.

Thursday — absolutely no gambling.

Friday — give up girl ogling.

Saturday — no fatty foods.

Sunday — give up swearing.

Under this program you have a real sense of victory because at least one day each week you are abstaining from a vice that is undermining your character. On the other hand, each day you can remain human by enjoying the other six.

You'll also have seven times as many withdrawal symptoms to talk about.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Lyndon Johnson Tells Friends Some Labor Chiefs Pressure Him Too Much -- Too Often

Washington, D. C. -- With typical Johnsonian sensitivity, the President is beginning to resent the fashion and frequency with which some capital labor leaders are pressuring him personally.

Not too long ago several union chiefs came by to see him and, as he later related the story, "pounded" his desk. They wanted a big push on some legislation . Finally, for the first time in anger, he told them, in effect: okay, go it alone if you want; I'm president of the U. S. and I'll do it in my own due time.

Later, reminiscing over the incident, he told some friends that it reminded him of an old Texas adage:

"You know if you corner a steer," he said, "one of two thngs happens -- he jumps the fence or you get run over."

The President is not running over any labor leaders but he is eying the fence.

He admires some union leaders. As a political scientist he has a healthy respect for their political sagacity and machinery. He has an almost emotional affection for two or three of them.

But a handful does not make a movement -- and he believes that some have let him down and it is difficult to get an old-fashioned agreement with many others.

So he has backed away from labor crises into which the late John Kennedy and the erstwhile Secretary of Labor, now Justice Arthur Goldberg, would have plunged.

And with him President Johnson has taken the White House staff and Secretary of Labor Wirtz.

The President and some of his advisers of the Cabinet feel they've been "bludgeoned" recently when they tried to move in on the labor front.

President Johnson asked publicly that the unions stay within the economic guidelines when asking for increases. This was designed to keep new labor costs at no more than a 3.2 per cent increase. Walter Reuther's auto union cracked the line. Now the steel union has smashed it.

At first it appeared that the United Steelworkers of America would seek about $20 a week more. A week later, new demands totaled $40 more per week per man. This would cost the steel industry about a billion dollars a year more.

But now analyses show that actually the new union demands may cost double that figure. This would mean higher prices, more foreign competition and an outflow of U. S. gold to other countries to pay for foreign steel.

And there is little that is closer to the President's heart now than keeping the life-giving gold in Fort Knox.

There were other instances where the White House public appeals were rejected just as publicly. Early this year the President asked the longshoremen to all go back to work. They did not.

So the President now has backed off from active intervention despite a series of crises looming in the nation's major industries. Following the Chief's policy is Willard Wirtz, who now has become America's "Mr. Manpower," as well as special adviser to Mr. Johnson on other matters.

But they have a man on the labor front -- and he'll be out front more and more. The public would do well to learn of him.

He's the 58-year-old William E. Simkin, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and independent U.S. executive agency. Once, under President Eisenhower this was a powerful force. But it was weakened and obscured by the dynamic insider, Arthur Goldberg. Now "Mediation" is moving again.

Tipoff came when Mr. Simkin, a big six-footer still carrying the wound of his old college football days, was signaled by the White House to shift into the looming new waterfront battle. This is different from the recent dockside strike of longshoremen.

The new crisis will come on June 15 when all contracts covering sea-going men expire. I'm informed that a West Coast shipping strike is almost inevitable. And it looks rough on the East Coast. Such a stoppage -- over size of crews on newly - automated ships -- could cost the country more than the $3 billion washed out during the dockwalloper s strike.

The assignment of Mr. Skimin to this turbulence is a sign of the times. It will be he who will be the administration's account executive in charge of strike crises.

Mr. Wirtz and the White House will move only in an extreme national emergency. The next step is Congress.

Obviously the President has not yet jumped the fence. But he sure is measuring it.

Spring Clean-Up Tips

In the basement make sure that combustibles are not stored near the heating unit.

And, check the whole basement area for combustibles you no longer need. Old empty paint cans and worn out brushes should be thrown out, and all paint you still need should be stored in covered metal cans. Old newspapers should be thrown out, and if you have a large accumulation of them, you can remove the fire hazard by giving them to some charitable organization.

If you have a coal furnace, ashes should be kept in a metal container equipped with a cover.

Don't forget the garage. If oil has dripped on the floor, clean it up and scrub the floor well. If you have gasoline for use in a power mower or outboard motor, it should be stored in a safety type can with self-closing caps on the openings.

If your garage is attached to the house, and there is an entrance from the house to the garage, the two should be kept separated by a tight - fitting door, and the door should be kept closed when not in use.

Your Clean-Up job, of course, includes the yard. Rake up all leaves and dry grass and dispose of them.

If you are thinking of burning leaves, check with the local police or fire department. In many towns and cities the burning of leaves in the open is prohibited or allowed only by permit.

If you are permitted to burn leaves, burn them well away from buildings, wooden fences and other structures. Before starting the fire, hook up the garden hose so that it will be handy if the fire appears to be getting out of hand. Don't permit children to play near the fire.

And, never, never, never burn leaves on a windy day.

Look for more Spring Clean-Up Tips tomorrow.

Drysdale Opens Attack To Gain Hard Victory

Don Drysdale, who had traveled this route before, was getting nowhere fast again. You'd think a guy would learn that batting his skull against the stone wall that is the Los Angeles Dodger attack, gets you nothing but a headache. But Drysdale. . .well, some guys just don't learn.

The lanky Dodger right-hander couldn't have forgotten the six losses he was tagged with last season when the Dodgers failed to get him a single run.

But Drysdale trudged out to the mound just the same Tuesday night. He throttled the New York Yankees for five innings and there he was, leading off the sixth against Bill Stafford, in a 0-0 tie.

Drysdale is a stubborn sort, though. He wasn't about to be shut out again, even if his club hadn't scored in 17 innings. He parked one of Stafford's serves over the left field fence to break the spell.

Flushed with success, the Dodgers assaulted rookie Gil Blanco for another run in the seventh - this one on Al Ferrara's pinch homer - and Drysdale made the runs stand up for a 2-0 victory.

The seven - hitter was Drysdale's fifth victory against no losses this complete -game victory for the Dodger staff. Sandy Koufax lost two route-going performances earlier.

The Braves battled 12 innings before losing to Washington 2-1. Catcher Mike Brumley had four hits and scored the winning run in the 12th when he doubled and then raced home on Sandy Alomar's throwing error.

Richie Allen, Philadelphia's Rookie of the Year last season, homered and doubled as the Phillies ripped Kansas City 5-1.

In other games, Houston beat Minnesota 2-1, San Francisco clipped the Los Angeles Angels 6-2, Detroit shelled Cincinnati 7-2, St. Louis downed Baltimore 3-1, Cleveland dropped Boston 5-4 and the Chicago White Sox split into two squads which defeated Pittsburgh 7-6 and the New York Mets 3-1.

Auerbach Smolders After Loss

PHILADELPHIA AP -- Red Auerbach was smoking Tuesday night but it wasn't his usual victory cigar.

The smoke was coming out o the ears of the Boston Celtics' coach after his team lost, 109-103 to the Philadelphia 76ers and sent the two teams back to Boston tied 1-1 in the best-of-7 series of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division final playoffs.

The Western Division final playoffs resume tonight with Los Angeles at Baltimore. The Lakers won the first two games of the series on the West Coast.

"This is a snakepit," Auerbach said of Convention Hall, the 76ers' home court. "It's a bush town. I've never liked it. They give you 10 orange juices for 11 guys."

"Okay, Red," said one observer. "So it's a snakepit, and bush, and you got only 10 orange juices, but how about that guy, Wilt Chamberlain."

Chamberlain, the 7-foot-1 star of the 76ers, was slightly juiced up himself. He scored 30 points, took down 39 rebounds, blocked eight shots and handed out eight assists. He simply overpowered the Celtics' Bill Russell, the NBA's Most Valuable Player.

Russell managed 12 points, 16 rebounds, had five assists.

Sam Jones, with 40 points, topped the defending NBA champions.

The third game in the series will be played at Boston Thursday night.

Contenders Feel That Golf Tournament Will Be Won On The Greens

AUGUSTA, Ga. AP -- Most of the top contenders here for the Masters Golf Tournament starting Thursday feel the championship will be won on the greens.

Jack Nicklaus, the long-hitting bomber and the 4-1 choice in this elite, international field of 93, doesn't agree entirely. "You still got to get there," said the 25-year-old husky from Columbus, Ohio, today.

Nicklaus, a nonwinner this year, served notice Tuesday that he appears fit and ready to break into the winner's circle. He unleashed a five-under-par 67 for the par 36-36-72, 6,980-yard Augusta National Golf Club layout on a hot and sunny afternoon.

The 5-foot-11, 200 -pounder closed out a round that included eight birdies and three bogeys by holing out a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe back of the green.

"It was a good round," said Nicklaus "but my short game was sloppy."

It was Nicklaus' first tour of the course since he left to spend the weekend with his family in Columbus. He had whipped the course five times last week with rounds of 68, 69,68, 68 and 70.

"I left because I didn't want to stay here too long and get stale," said the smiling and jovial 1963 Masters king. "I preferred to work on my game last week before the crowds came and so I wouldn't be bothered. I practiced before and after each round."

Asked to name five chief contenders, Nicklaus pondered and then named defending champion Arnold Palmer, South African Gary Player, Australia's Bruce Devlin, Tony Lema and Billy Casper.

Palmer, who expressed concern over his driving and putting, picked Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Devlin, Casper and Lema to give him the most trouble.

The defending king and record four-time winner is the 6-1 second choice behind Nicklaus for the four-day 72-hole tournament. Sanders, Lema, Casper and Player are bracketed at 8-1 in the informal odds.

"Then you can't count anyone out of this tournament," added Palmer." They have to be good to make it in the first place.

Bulldogs Win At Charleston

The Sikeston High School Bulldogs met head on with four other area teams yesterday in the Charleston Invitational Track and Field Tourney.

The Bulldogs came out with a second place finish easily although, host Charleston did win first by finishing 12 1/2 points above Sikeston. East Prairie, Jackson and Perryville finished in that order to round out the field for the meet.

Charleston had 10 first place finishers compared to two for East Prairie, 1 for Jackson. Perryville had no finishers in the winners circle. Sikeston had the dominant athletes in two events finishing first in the broad jump led by Jim Kiehne and in the high jump with a fine effort by Blackman.

Here are the team and individual scores for the meet; Charleston 92, Sikeston 79 1/2, East Prairie 34, Jackson 22 1/2, Perryville 10.

Citation Gets Statue In His Honor

LEXINGTON, Ky. AP -- It has been 14 years since Citation quit racing for a more leisurely life at Calumet Farm, but many racing fans remember how the big bay humbled his rivals on America's tracks.

Tourists stream through Calumet's devil - red and white gate-800 to 1,000 daily during the spring and summer-and most of them are there to see Citation.

Citation recently topped the voting in a poll to determine the best runner to compete at Hialeah Park in the 40 years the Florida track has been operating. A bronze statue was unveiled in his honor.

The recognition isn't surprising to Hugh Fields, who has cared for Citation since he was retired in 1951 to the 850-acre showplace near Lexington.

"He's the greatest, that's all," said Fields.

The admiration is mutual. Citation, last to win the Triple Crown-the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes of 1948-is a "one man horse".

Sometimes the 53-year-old Fields is called to work on his off day because Citation refuses to return to his stall in the stud barn.

Fields opened the stall door so a visitor could get a better view of the handsome animal.

"Look at him," Fields said. "Cy has one of the most intelligent heads I've ever seen on a horse. He knows what's going on."

The big horse stood quietly. He didn't need to be tied. All the while Fields kept busy chatting and brushing Cy's coat.

Fields conceded that Citation has a fault that is not uncommon to middle-aged humans.

"He likes to eat too much and we have him on a mild diet," Fields said.

Citation's weight has gone to 1,350 pounds from the 1,100 he carried while becoming the first thoroughbred millionaire.

Except in midsummer, Citation is led out of his stall at 7 a.m. daily for exercise. He is back in his stall at 1 p.m. The routine changes at midsummer. He is turned out at 3 p.m. and is left in the cool paddock until 8 o'clock the next morning.

He is never left unattended. A night watchman comes on duty at 6 p.m. and stays until relieved.

Through 1964, horses sired by Citation have earned $2,868,-106. Among his 212 foals to reach racing age were 12 stakes winners and 110 other winners. His stud fee is $3,500.

When Citation, the son of Bull Lea-Hydroplane II, retired he left a four-year racing record of 32 wins, 10 seconds, and two thirds in 45 starts and earnings of $1,085,760.

After winning the Belmont with Citation, jockey Eddie Arcaro said, "I let him run a little bit on the turn and he went so fast he scared me. I took hold of him again."

Court Styles Come and Go; Iba Is True to His Fashion

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA)—Hank Iba's basketball players at Oklahoma State certainly no different from other college students dance the Watusi instead of the Lindy, listen to the Beatles instead of Glenn Miller and they travel in DC-8s not Ford Tri-Motors.

Aside from that, everything about Oklahoma State University's basketball team is strictly out of the 1930s.

Hank Iba took over as coach in Stillwater, Okla., in 1934, and from the beginning Oklahoma State's trade marks have been possession ball and good defense.

Thirty seasons later, despite a 360-degree change in basketball styles, the same combination is working perfectly for Iba who has another excellent team, one that could end up Big Eight champion.

Just to prove his methods aren't outdated, Iba was the coach of the 1964 U.S. Olympic team that won in Tokyo last fall.

"I really learned from him," said Lucious Jackson, one of the Olympians who is a rookie now with the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association.

"He gets on one thing and he stresses that point until everyone knows it. It doesn't matter if it's offense or defense. You have to learn it.

"I suppose that's why his teams at Oklahoma State play such deliberate ball. When they're on offense they have the plays down so well they can just wait for the good opportunity.

"Defensively, he just told us we wouldn't win if we didn't play it right. He said it was the key, and everybody knew it. He started with a few fundamentals and worked from there. It turned out he was right."

At Oklahoma State where Iba produced back-to-back NCAA championship teams in 1945 and '46, defense and ball control are just accepted parts of the basketball program.

"An awful lot of people give lip service to defense in basketball," Iba has said, "but we work at it in Stillwater.

"Here is our chief contention—airtight defense will get you there more often than a high-geared offense. The point is this: I don't care how good some 'shooting' team is, the offense of that club will fluctuate by a much wider margin than will a defense as good as ours ordinarily is.

"Why, some variations will amount to as much as 10 or 15 points per night. It's even more so now than in the past because teams are losing the ball a lot more these days. That's due to the change in the game. We don't have passers any more.

"On our poor nights we figure our defense will carry us. Consistency is our main theme, and we like to think that our game develops a clear, methodical kind of thinker.

"Our man has a good reason for everything he does on that court. He does nothing on impulse; he follows his mind's good reasoning.

"Here is our prevailing motto: 'Think and then act. Never act, and then alibi.'"

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why are the U.S. Constitution and the Declaration of Independence kept in helium-filled glass cases?

A—Helium, an inert gas, protects the documents from atmospheric dangers. The documents are written on sheepskin parchments, which would be subject to attack by gases in air, damage by light or by humidity or dryness in air. The glass cases have special filters to protect the parchments from damage by ultraviolet radiation from light.

Q—How many of our presidents had no children?

A—Six—Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Harding, and Buchanan, the latter a bachelor.

Where the Money Comes From—Major State Tax Sources

Among the larger state tax sources are: general sales, personal income, corporate income, motor fuel, tobacco and alcoholic beverages. Together, these six sources brought in $47 billion in 1964. The map shows that 19 states have at least one of these three: corporate income, personal income or general sales. 23 have all three; 15 have two each and 11 have one of the three. Nebraska levies on motor fuel, on tobacco products and alcoholic beverages, but not on the other three sources. The figures in each state show the 1963 per capita taxes.

The State Reorganization Commission of Missouri

THE CENTRAL MANAGEMENT AGENCIES (Con't.)

75. Recommendation:

That the function of the ex officio Board of Public Buildings be limited to the approval or disapproval of allocations of space made by the Division of Public Buildings.

This recommendation of the 1955 Commission calls attention to the responsibility of the Board of Public Buildings to generally supervise and manage state property located in Jefferson City. These responsibilities may be too encompassing for the board--the director may be able to discharge such responsibilities more rapidly and efficiently than the board.

The Board of Public Buildings still appoints and supervises the director. The board should be concerned with matters of policy, while the director should be concerned with providing the required building services.

At the present time there are several building services that should be provided. Some of these services are suggested by the following facts:

(1) There is no provision for common janitorial services. Each agency must hire its own custodian. Smaller agencies usually hire part-time custodians, who are seldom available during office hours for emergency or random chores.

(2) There is no provision for minor remodeling or redecorating as a common building service. Agencies must provide their own workmen. It is possible that some agency supervisors are not qualified to negotiate agreements with craftsmen.

In general there is a host of building services required by all offices that could be more efficiently and uniformly administered the Director of Public Buildings than by the various agency supervisors. The director should provide these common building services.

ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES SECTION

76. Recommendation:

That an administrative services section be established within the Division of Budget and Comptroller, the head of the section to be appointed by the head of the division with the approval of the Governor. The section head should be trained in administrative management procedures, and together with all employees should be selected on the basis of professional qualifications.

The Administrative Services Section was recommended by the 1955 Commission. Unsuccessful legislation creating the unit has usually identified the proposed agency as the Administrative Management Unit. Regardless of the section's name, its potential contribution to efficient government administration could save many dollars.

Other sections of this report enumerate badly needed common services that should be performed by this section. Examples of these common services are: (1) forms control and standardization; (2) counsel and advice on data processing equipment and systems; (3) counsel on records management; (4) coordination of inter - office and inter- building communications; and (5) counsel on efficient use of duplication equipment. Many other duties could be listed.

Such a section is commonly found in organizations as large as Missouri's government. Services that are the common requirement of several operating departments can be more efficiently coordinated and supervised by a section specializing in such activities. Since the Administrative Services Section provides specialist - advisors to other departments, it is important to maintain a staff that is well qualified in management and administrative procedures.

The rapid changes in administration brought about by today's dynamic technological advances, make the establishment of a section of specialists necessary for maintaining administrative efficiency.

Many Tax Informers

By ADREN COOPER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 100,000 informers held the Internal Revenue Service each year by providing tips on people who haven't paid their taxes.

The IRS says many do so "from patriotic motivation or civic duty." A few get paid for it.

The number of persons providing such tips has grown steadily.

An IRS spokesman said the service doesn't solicit income tax tips but merely evaluates those that come in and follows them up if an investigation seems warranted. He noted that the FBI and other law enforcement agencies use informers routinely.

Only one out of every 10 tips results in even a preliminary investigation.

In the fiscal year which ended last June 30, the service collected $18.1 million as a result of tips compared with $12.7 million in the previous year.

The IRS paid $565,000 to 822 informers last year.

It has accepted tips for many years although the practice has been criticized by those who contend the informers are seeking revenge or perhaps are merely envious of a wealthy neighbor or employer.

A Congress member who heard from some of his constituents on the subject asked the service for an explanation.

A recently prepared memorandum from the IRS said:

"It is important to note that the number of persons who volunteer information and make no claim for reward is 20 times as great as the number who do claim rewards. It is reasonable to assume, too, that many of those who do not claim a reward, are impelled to furnish information from patriotic motivation or civic duty.

"On the basis of these factors, it seems questionable that the elimination of rewards will eliminate informing."

The IRS figures indicated that about 95,000 persons offered tips in fiscal 1964.

One IRS practice may deter quite a few would-be tipsters: Whenever a tip is received, the IRS investigates the informer as well as the tip.

Angry Teacher States Views In Full Page Ad.

WAYZATA, Minn., (AP) — Douglas Sarff, a high school teacher for 10 years, says the students of this Minneapolis suburb are "self-centered, frivolous and lead a slick, empty life" and he is fed up.

Sarff, 30, an English teacher in 10th and 11th grades at Wayzata Senior High School, paid $140 for a full page in a weekly newspaper to air his opinions.

Then he announced he had written to his school board several weeks ago that he did not want his contract renewed.

Donald Freeburg, also an English teacher at the high school said "most teachers expressed disbelief" that Sarff had the letter printed, and added that "a teacher with a family and other responsibilities just couldn't do it."

Roald Johnson, principal at Wayzata High School, would not comment on the letter. He said he thought Wayzata was little different from any other suburban school.

Sarff, a bachelor, said today, "I've saved up some money and after the current term ends in June I'm going to take my car, a tent and a few other things and travel into the Southwest and write a book. Not about the subject of this local tempest, or about suburbia, but a novel."

The ad in the Minnetonka Herald complained about the high school administration and parents of the community of about 3,500. Most of it, however, was directed at the high school seniors.

They are, he said, "frozen with sophistication" and "perpetuate the slick, empty modern living that is seen as its worst in this town."

"It is a shrill, hand-waving, convertible-riding round of trivialities, and for the young a blurred descent into oblivion, because, having exhausted its substance by age 17 and knowing nothing else, they become bored with themselves, with others, and with life," said the ad.

"I tell you, I have seen enough living death. I have been able to absorb everything else, attacks from all sides, the indifference of slow learners required to take my course, even being dropped back a step on the salary schedule last spring, but the petrification of a once-vital young person is a sight so ugly that all my senses reel from it."

Opinion in Wayzata was about evenly divided among those favoring Sarff's views and those opposing them.

A senior girl said, "You learn more from him in one day than you do from the other teachers in a whole year."

A senior boy, John Olson, said he thought the letter "was a lash-out before he slammed the door."

Sarff was graduated from the University of Minnesota 10 years ago, and taught at Winona and Wadena, Minn., before coming to Wayzata in 1960.

Income Tax Questions And Answers

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q-Is it true that students are allowed a double tax exemption?

A-In one sense they are. A full-time student filing his own return should claim one exemption for himself. If his parent provides more than one-half his support then the parent can claim a n exemption for him too, assuming the other tests of dependency are met.

Q-I have a question about the moving expense deduction. I moved in 1963 but the 39 week requirement was not up until 1964. Can I take this deduction on my 1964 return?

A-No. These expenses may be deducted only if they were incurred after December 31, 1963.

Q-My wife and I are separated. How do I file my income tax return and which tax table should I use?

A-You are considered married if there has been no divorce or legal separation by the end of your taxable year. You have a choice of filing jointly with your wife or filing separately. The way you file will determine which tax table to use.

Q-I worked for two employers last year. Where should I enter the excess Social Security tax withheld from my wages on the 1040 form?

A-If more than $174 of Social Security tax was withheld, the excess on line 17 a, "total federal income tax withheld", and add it to the amount withheld for income tax. Enter the total as a single item. Also, to the left of this total, write "excess F.I.C.A." and the amount.

Q-When I moved last year to take a new job, I had to sell my home at a loss. Can I deduct this on my tax return?

A-No. The tax law considers this to be a personal expense and not deductible.

Q-I am reimbursed by my employer for the business traveling and entertaining I do. Must I also report these business expenses and my reimbursements on my tax return?

A-If you account to your employer for these expenses, the expenses are equal to the reimbursement, and you do not deduct the expenses on your return, you need not supply a similar accounting with your tax return and the reimbursement need not be included. However, if your reimbursement exceeds your expenses, the excess should be reported as income.

Q-I've been told that if you are married you have to file a joint return to claim child care expenses. My husband had deserted me and can't be found, so I can't file jointly. Does that eliminate me from claiming this deduction?

A -- A 1963 law liberalized this provision to help deserted wives. The 1964 tax law further liberalized this provision to include husbands who pay for child care because their wives are incapacitated. Check your 1040 instructions for details on this provision. Form 2441 should be filed when this deduction is claimed. You don't have to be married to claim these expenses.

Q -- My wife and I adopted a child this past year. May we claim the lawyer's fees as a tax deduction?

A -- No. This is considered a personal expense. A legally adopted child, however, may be claimed as a dependent if the other necessary tests of dependency are met.

Q -- I've heard that the 1964 tax law made some changes in the rules on business travel expenses. What were they?

A -- The rule that transportation expenses must be allocated between business and non-business was changed so that it now applies only to travel outside the United States. The allocation rule applies when a taxpayer combines a business trip abroad with pleasure. Under certain conditions, the transportation expenses of the trip must be divided into business and nonbusiness portions and only the business portions may be deducted.

Q -- Is there any interest deduction for tuition payments when they are made on an installment plan and the carrying charge is separately stated?

A -- Under the new tax law, carrying charges on payments for educational services are treated as if they included interest. This would include tuition paid on installments. To figure the deduction take 6 per cent of the average unpaid balance during the taxable year in question.

Q -- Do my wife and I both have to be 65 to be able to deduct all of our medical expenses?

A -- No you don't. If either of you are 65 or over at the end of the tax year then all medical expenses for you and your wife may be deducted. In this situation the expenses are not subject to the 3 per cent limitation on medical expenses or the 1% limitation for medicines and drugs.

Q -- I saw a story in the paper the other day that some taxpayers were paying more than they should by using the wrong tax table. How can I be sure I don't do the same thing?

A -- The errors usually occurred when a married couple filing jointly using the tax table "D," which is for married couples filing separately. If you are married and filing jointly, and use the table, make sure the one you use is table "A".

Q -- There is no space on the 1040 form to list the names of my children. Should I put their names on a separate statement when I file my return?

Q -- The names of dependent children who live with you need no longer be listed on Forms 1040 or 1040A. Just enter the number of children you claim in the box provided. Dependents other than children living with you must still be identified by name and relationship.

Q -- My bank keeps asking for my Social Security number. Do they have a right to it?

A -- Yes they do. Congress passed a law in 1962 requiring individuals to supply their banks, savings institutions, corporations in which they own stock and other institutions from which they received interest or dividends with their tax account number. In most cases, this number is your social security number.

You must supply this number even though you may not be required to file a tax return and you are not covered by social security. If you are not covered by social security you can either obtain a social security number or apply for an identification number from the Internal Revenue Service.

Q -- What is the tax "blue" book?

A -- This is a publication titled "Your Federal Income Tax" which explains in detail the income tax law relating to individual taxpayers. It costs 50 cents and is available at Internal Revenue offices, or can be ordered from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

Q -- When my son was born I set up a savings account for him. I regularly make payments into it as I plan to use it for his college education. How do I report the interest from this account?

A -- If you have control over the funds, and can withdraw them at your own discretion, the income should be reported on your return, and your social security number should also be used to identify this account.

Q-- My wife and I meet the income qualifications for filing the 1040A. We have about $75 in dividends after the exclusion, but can't find a place on the form to take the dividend credit. Should we file a separate statement?

A -- If the dividend credit is claimed Form 1040 must be used, not Form 1040A.

Stuart Symington Reports from Washington

BECAUSE OF THE DIRECT EFFECT on prices paid for Missouri livestock, we are pleased by the continued reduction in the amount of beef imports. In calendar year 1964, imports totaled 1.3 billion pounds, as compared to 1.86 billion pounds in 1963 and 1.72 billion pounds in 1962.

Last year imports of beef and veal were equal to 6.7 percent of United States production, as compared to 10 percent in 1963, 10.5 percent in 1962, and 7.9 percent in 1961.

Of even more immediate interest is the fact that this year, imports are running two to three percent lower than a year ago.

The current reduction and that last year may account in part for a small increase in the price producers are receiving for choice cattle, about 10 percent over the same period last year. But there is cause for concern among cattle producers in the fact that there were 80.3 million head of beef cattle on U.S. farms and in the feedlots January 1, 1965, as compared to 79.1 million the preceding year and 75.1 million on January 1, 1963.

The Office of Education reports that Missouri ranks among the top states for the quality of work and the results under the Manpower Development and Training Act.

In an April 1 report, Missouri ranked 9th among the states in the number of Manpower Training graduates who have completed training since the start of the program in 1962, and 72 percent of these Manpower training graduates were in jobs.

One notable example of the effect of this training is in Sikeston. Dr. Harold Vogel, Administrative Assistant of the Public Schools notified me recently that of 116 formerly unemployed trainees in four fields of work, all but two have been placed into jobs. Their training was in automatic heat and refrigeration, building and ground maintenance, clerk-stenography and practical nursing. In addition, 21 auto mechanics have been trained. A new project in Sikeston of multi-occupation classes for 400 enrollees has now been approved.

Copies are now available of President Johnson's new legislative proposal for public works grants and other financial assistance to areas of long-term unemployment and underemployment. To be known as the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, the proposals combines features from Area Redevelopment, Appalachian Regional Development, and Accelerated Public Works programs.

The Bills, H. R. 6991, and S. 1648, have been referred to the House and Senate Public Works Committees.

At the present time, under the criteria in the proposed legislation, some 29 Missouri counties would be eligible for participation in this program.

It was an honor Sunday, April 4, in St. Louis, to receive the Herbert H. Lehman Israel award, given in the name of the late Governor of New York, United States Senator, and first Director General of UNRRA.

It was also a privilege to speak at the meeting of the St. Louis Research Council on April 2.

Missouri Press Report From Edward Long

Missouri farm people have found cause for concern in the proposed Federal budget sent to Congress earlier this year.

The proposed budget for fiscal 1966 provides for a slash of $20 million in soil and water conservation district assistance. District cooperators would be expected to make up the deficit by paying service fees into a Federal revolving fund. The fund would be set up to provide financing for the soil conservation program.

Charges to be billed to landowners would run up to 50 percent of the cost of technical assistance received by the districts.

The cut-back in Federal financing coupled with the heavy burden to be placed on farmers could well cripple the soil and water conservation program in Missouri. Letters protesting the proposed action have come into my office from nearly all of Missouri's 65 soil and water districts.

I have voiced my concern at the conservation budget cut in remarks prepared for use on the Senate floor. Also for the record of Senate proceedings, I cited a resolution adopted by the Missouri State House of Representatives, expressing a similar view of the matter.

Soil and water conservation districts in Missouri have made great strides forward in the important task of conserving our State's valuable neutral resources. Yet, an estimated eleven million acres of Missouri cropland is still subject to erosion, and some four million acres of flatland have drainage problems.

The work of the Soil Conservation Service deserves to be continued and encouraged, not crippled with a reduction in funds.

Any responsible efforts made in the Senate to restore adequate funds to the budget for the conservation program will include my strongest support.

Last week, I submitted testimony to a subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations urging passage of legislation almost identical to my Freedom of Information Bill.

The continuing problem of unjustified government secrecy keeps the spotlight on the need for an effective disclosure statute. More than fifteen Congressmen have introduced legislation touching on the subject of adequate access to government information.

Hearings on the Voting Rights Act of 1965 have filled the agenda of the Senate Judiciary Committee in recent days. Testimony given the Committee has revealed widespread support for the measure. It is expected that the bill will come up for consideration on the Senate floor within the next few days.

Today's Spanish Lesson

Lesson No. 38
Reading time 5 Min.
Study time 5 Min.

If the English word ends in 'ty' change the ending to 'dad' to form a Spanish word:

A) activity B) actividad C) ahk-tee-vee-DAHD

A) celebrity B) celebridad C) say-lay-bree-DAHD

A) opportunity B) oportunidad C) o-pore-tune-e-DAHD

A) necessity B) necesidad C) nay-say-see-DAHD

A) humanity B) humanidad C) oo-mahn-e-DAHD

A) possibility B) posibilidad C) poe-see-be-lee-DAHD

Just by changing 'ty' to 'dad' you own your English 'ty' ending words in Spanish. Doesn't it give you courage to know that you can convert all of these words to Spanish?

I am sure that now, when you hear or see words such as, 'doctor,' 'descripcion', 'pacifico,' 'actividad,' 'comico,' 'ambicioso,' 'artista,' 'presidente,' 'adversario,' etc., you will know that you own them in both languages; and that you have the verb "keys" to get to them -- 'quiero' (I want), 'puedo' (I can), 'tengo que' (I have to), 'voy a' (I am going, I am going to) and 'fui a' (I went).

You also know that if a Spanish word ends in 'AR,' 'ER' or 'IR,' it is the infinitive of a verb. Just remember that the Spanish verb endings, 'AR,' 'ER' and 'IR', form the infinitive, just as placing the preposition 'to' in front of a verb forms the infinitive in English.

Dear Editor:

I have before me an article by Walter Lippmann entitled "The Fifteenth Amendment". He started out by stressing the wording of the said amendment, quote: "forbids the denial or abridgement of the right of citizens of the United States to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

Now, this sort of brainwashing is just an example of why I think that voters must have a test to prove that they understand the U.S. Constitution before they can register.

A person who doesn't know much will conclude by this quotation that he should go along with the Federal Government (liberal) program in order to obey the constitution. A person who is poorly informed can be fooled so easily!

Now, I don't think there is any way that anyone can say that the Fifteenth Amendment came before our basic Constitution, which says that voting control is placed in the hands of the State Governments. The South is completely correct in their stand of States' Rights. Our forefathers wrote the Constitution like this to prevent us from falling into dictatorship!

A voting test, when applied in exactly the same form to whites as well as negroes, will in no way violate the Fifteenth Amendment, because the only discrimination would be on the basis of knowledge, and this would be equally applied to whites and negroes alike.

Sincerely,
George Spriesterstaech

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My daughter-in-law lives by "the book." "The book" tells her it is the son's duty to write to his mother. I agree, but don't you feel there should be another chapter in the book saying if a son doesn't write to his mother (most sons are too busy making a living) it is perfectly permissible for his wife to write about the grandchild?

I can't be a cookie-jar-type of grandmother because I am a working woman with very little money and less time. Eight hundred miles separate me from my son and his family. So, please, Ann, publish this letter and perhaps other daughters-in-law will see it and take note -- even if my own daughter-in-law does not. - UNDER-PRIVILEGED GRANDMOTHER

Dear U. P.: I don't know what book your daughter-in-law is living by unless it's one she wrote herself. Rare, indeed, is the son who writes regularly to his mother. Usually the daughter-in-law gets the words down on paper and encloses the snapshots. In MY book this comes under the heading of being a good wife.

Perhaps your daughter-in-law hates to write letters. A telephone call every other Sunday (station-to-station at a mutually convenient time) could be the permanent solution to this problem -- and I strongly recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I tried for a scholarship and didn't make it. I did my best but my best just wasn't good enough. Both my mother and father have made me feel as if I am retarded or something. They asked me to explain why a friend of mine (they think he is a rockhead) got a scholarship and I didn't. My Dad said, "I just can't believe you aren't smarter than the dumb cluck. What happened?"

I realize it is normal for parents to want their children to be outstanding, but we can't all make it. Please say something to take the heat off. Students in Japan commit suicide over less. -- LOSER AT BATTLE CREEK

Dear Loser: There is entirely too much pressure on high school kids to excel, too much pressure to get into prestigious schools.

The student who does his best should not be made to feel like a failure. A grade of C may be more difficult for one student to make than an A is for another. I hold no brief for the goof-off who does poorly because he won't put forth the effort, but the kid who tries hard should be praised and encouraged.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you had a letter in your column from "Joe," a non-drinker who got fed up with people who tried to force liquor on him at cocktail parties. His solution (pouring the drink into the nagger's pocket) was a gutty one, but he was justified since people must protect themselves against boors as best they can.

Now, what can dieters do when the hostess keeps pushing food on them? One friend said to me last night, "Oh, I fixed the spaghetti and garlic bread just for you." (That's three pounds right there!)

Another friend always pleads, "Just taste it." Then she shoves the corn fritter under my nose. Of course that breaks down my resistance and I eat it.

Is there a solution -- short of doing a Mack Sennett and heaving the pie in the hostess' face? -- HELP

Dear Help: Yes. Eat at home and tell your friends, "Doctor's orders."

People who accept dinner invitations are expected to eat what the hostess prepares.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the boobytraps of teenage drinking, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cuts Post Office Funds

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General John A. Gronouski says "we'll have to pull in our belt" on postal service unless some of the House-voted cut in postal funds is restored.

He said in an interview today he was "shocked and awfully disappointed" that the House had slashed $69 million from his budget.

If the Senate doesn't come up with a healthy restoration, he said, "We'll have to pull in our belt somewhere, and with mail volume rising as it is, that's got to affect service.

"Something will have to give. I'll try to do it in the most inoffensive way possible — but if you don't have the money you have to look for a way to cut costs. This has an effect on service; you just can't be too gentle about it."

The House Appropriations Committee made the cut last week in approving a postal budget of $5,313,400,000. The full House endorsed the package Monday.

"I'm afraid I didn't make my point to the House committee well enough," Gronouski said. "I'm going to have to do better with the Senate next week."

Gronouski and other top postal officials expressed bafflement that the cut — most of which came under postal operations — could be made when congressional criticism of postal efficiency and morale is running so high.

It was a $9-million budget cut, an aide said, that caused Gronouski to curtail window and parcel post service last year, loosing an avalanche of public and congressional criticism.

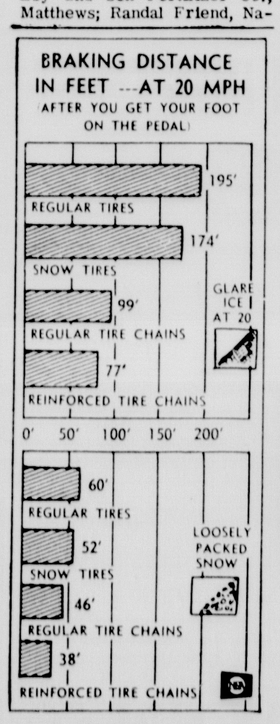

"My problem is that I went in there with a budget pared to the bone," the stocky former Wisconsin tax official said. "The President insists that's the way we do it. It isn't like 10 years ago, when the Post Office Department went up there with a big fat budget to give the congressmen something to cut."

Gronouski wanted to hire 15,000 new workers to counter an overtime problem that has employes working 60-hour and 70-hour weeks.

The committee last week cut the number to 1,300, and thereby trimmed $10 million from the budget.

S. aviation pioneer who flew the Atlantic in a solo crossing in 1932, was a military nurse in Canada during World War I and was for several years a social worker in Boston before taking up flying. She also made a number of long distance solo flights across the U. S. in an Autogiro, a forerunner of the helicopter. She was lost in the Pacific on an attempted global flight in 1937.

Fifth Graders Entertain Kiwanis

A fifth grade class of pupils of the Matthews Elementary School of Sikeston presented a musical program for the Kiwanis Club Tuesday night.

They were directed by their teacher, Mrs. Eula Underwood, and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Helen Loud Jones, Music Supervisor of the Sikeston Elementary Schools.

Their number consisted of a variety of folk songs in two-part harmony. A Swiss Mountain Song, "Spring Has Come," a French folk song, "Song of the Breezes" and a Polish tune "Bells Above the Chapel." Two songs were of Italian origin, the popular "Ciribiribin" and "O Song of Venice," and "Adelita" a favorite Mexican song.

Rhythm instruments, triangle, maracas, castanets, bells and rhythm sticks added to the melodic melody and tempo of the Italian and Mexican numbers.

A humorous song "Winky Tooden" whose words were written by the poet James Whitcomb Riley, had a definite lilting rhythm and marked accents.

The concluding number was "The Stars And The Stripes Forever." The flag was presented by a color guard. Then the group sang the stirring and appropriate words which have been set to this favorite march of John Philip Sousa.

Large Hail In Crowder

What is to believed to be the largest hail in this area in many years struck the Crowder and McMullin area yesterday around 3 p.m. The hailstones were described by a number of persons to be the size of hen eggs, damaged a number of rooftops, as well as breaking several windows in the Scott Central School. Fortunately the crop damage was very little in the three or four mile area, as the vegetation had not yet advanced far enough to be hurt very much.

Highest point in development of letter-writing was achieved in England and France during the 17th and 18th centuries.

Sunrise Service Plans Complete

NEW MADRID -- Plans have been completed for the annual Easter Sunrise Service which will be held at about 6 o'clock Sunday morning, April 18th, on the Mississippi River at New Madrid.

The service is being sponsored and arranged by members of the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Pentecostal churches of New Madrid, Kewanee, Marston and Lilbourn and is conducted by laymen of the churches.

Feature attraction of the annaul service will be a pageant portraying events leading to and including the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ and the four major scenes to be portrayed are the Lord's Last Supper, in the Garden of Gethsemane, the arrest and crucifixion and the resurrection.

Music for the service will be furnished by choir members of the several churches.

Seating facilities and an altar are being placed at the scene, which is on the river side of the levee just west of the Kingshighway intersection with Water street.

Several thousand persons have attended this pageant in past years. All persons who do not have sunrise services in their own churches are invited to attend this beautiful and inspirational service.

House Debates Medicare

By EDMOND LE BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House opens debate today on a $6-billion bill to give older Americans hospital care, low-cost medical insurance and bigger Social Security checks.

The measure, which carries benefits for some 20 million persons and higher taxes for most workers and their employers, is the biggest single enlargement of Social Security since the system was founded in 1936.

Further Tests To Be Made On Dying Fish

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — Don Kuester, a biologist for the State Conservation Commission, said Tuesday preliminary tests indicated that disease caused the death of about 40,000 fish in Washout Lake.

Kuester conducted the tests near New Madrid. He said ammonia from the aerial spraying of fertilizer was found in the lake water. But, Kuester said, there wasn't enough ammonia to account for the fish kill.

He said lab tests would be made in Jefferson City and a more complete report would be available in about two weeks.

Five City Arrests

The city police made five arrests in the past 24 hours. Clyde C. Fodge, 1513 E. Gladys, charged with no city auto license, was given summons to appear in court.

Buddy Harris, 374 Magnolia, charged with petty larceny, was given summons.

Silvester Bicham, Sikeston, charged with petty larceny, was given summons.

Hardware Store Broken Into

MORLEY -- The Mayfield Hardware and Supply store at Morley experienced the second break-in within a year last night.

The burglers entered through the back door, believed to be around midnight, and broke into the soda machine taking all the money, also missing were cigarettes, and some shock absorbers.

The store is owned by Crulus Mayfield and he reports that his store was broken into about this time last year. He is still looking to see if anymore merchandise is missing.

William Lingle

William Lingle Given Grant At SIU

-- Southern Illinois University has awarded 59 fellowships in 26 fields of graduate study on the basis of academic records and recommendations.

Included in the list of winners is William M. Lingle of Sikeston, awarded a fellowship to do graduate work in English.

David Kenney, acting dean of the SIU Graduate School, said the fellowships go into effect with the fall term.

"There is strong competition for these fellowships, which assist financially with work on master's and doctoral degrees," Kenny said. "Numerous applications received here are first ranked by the departments in which students would do their study on the basis of scholastic records and letters of recommendation from their department heads and professors. Then they go through a final evaluation in the Graduate School."

Kenney said many of the students awarded fellowships are now attending Southern Illinois University as seniors or graduate students. Stipends the winners will receive vary from $180 to $220 a month. In connection with the fellowships the students will work ten hours a week. Their duties will be assigned by chairman of departments in which they will study for their advanced degrees.

Caution Urged For Motorists

From reports received from the offices of the State Highway Commission and the State Highway Patrol it has been learned that there are several places in Southeast Missouri that should be approached cautiously by motorists.

In the Cape Girardeau and Scott Counties there is grading going on adjacent to pavement at Scott City.

In the New Madrid and Scott Counties the traffic that is traveling on Interstate Route 57 to Route 77 is urged to watch for men and equipment. Obey the flagmen and use extreme caution.

In Stoddard County there is new construction going on on Highway 25 in and south of Dexter and near Bloomfield.

In Mississippi County there is new grading adjacent to existing route north of Junction of Route 105. Watch for equipment and obey the flagmen.

In New Madrid County, work is underway with grading and bridge work going on at new location of I-Route. 55 B.P. is in effect and is an occasional equipment crossing.

Today In U.S. History

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, April 7, the 97th day of 1965. There are 268 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1788, a band of 47 men, most of them veterans of the Revolution, stepped ashore at what was to be Marietta, Ohio. They immediately wrote a set of laws and nailed it to a tree. It established the first formally organized government in what was then the Northwest.

On this date

In 1798, Congress organized the Territory of Mississippi, including the present State of Alabama.

In 1891, one of the great showmen of all time, Phineas T. Barnum, died.

In 1933, beer and wine became legal in the United States after 13 dry years.

In 1942, Japanese dive-bombers machine gunned American forces on Bataan Peninsula.

In 1945, U. S. carrier planes sunk Japan's largest battleship, the Yamato, off Kyushu Island.

Ten years ago -- President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Paris pacts granting sovereignty to West Germany.

Five years ago-- The American Chemical Society was given evidence at a meeting in Cleveland that nuclear fallout had less effect on soils and crops that had been anticipated.

One year ago -- A federal grand jury indicted eight of the largest steel companies on charges of price-fixing.

Reapportionment May Be Settled By A Computer

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri's thorniest legislative problem -- reapprotionment of its House of Representatives - may be solved with a slide-rule.

At least this is the hope of Rep. Earl Bollinger, D-Madison County.

Bollinger explained his plan for a "weighted vote" Tuesday night before a legislative committee.

One of a number of plans advanced to meet the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote decision, Bollinger's proposal would maintain the present number of representative districts, but give the representative a fractional vote depending on the number of constituents.

For example, a representative from sparsely populated Worth County would have 2-16ths of a vote. A district representative from St. Louis would have 15 1/2 votes.

An alternative means of calculating the weight of the vote would give the Worth County representative one vote. The St. Louis legislator would have 15 1/2 votes.

Under the sixteenth systems, the House would have a total tally of 2607 -16 - or 162 15-16 votes. The other system would yield a total of 1303 1/2 votes.

Bollinger siad that even though the plan is complicated, it would preserve the identity of rural counties. He said he is opposed to grouping several counties in one district.

Despite the levity the measure has triggered, Bollinger said he introduced it and will support it sincerely.

Also posed was the problem of tabulating the votes in the House. Bollinger said a computer would have to be installed on the electronic board in the House. It would do away with voice votes, he admitted.

Also discussed by the committee was a "back-stop" bill" to set up a system for electing representatives at large if no reapportionment measure passes this session and an at large election is ordered by the courts.

Offered by Rep. R. J. Bus; King, R-St. Louis County, the measure calls for Democratic and Republican conventions to nominate 108 candidates for the House.

The 108-candidate restriction would protect the minority party from a clean sweep in an at-large election.

Rep. Alfred A. Speer, R-St. Louis County, who presented the bill for King, said it would reduce the "unbelievable chaos" which might occur if an at-large election were necessary.

It was patterned after a system used in Illinois, he said.

The House Agriculture Committee revived and approved a bill to prohibit open range in the few remaining counties where it still exists.

The bill was defeated by a narrow margin a week ago.

Jr. - Sr. Prom Set For Lilbourn

LILBOURN: "Tropical Island" has been selected as the theme for this year's Junior-Senior Prom to be held May 1

Tentative plans call for the gymnasium to be decorated with artificial palm leaves, tropical fruit, and it is hoped, life-size, artificial hula girls.

Planning for the prom is being done by a committee of junior students: James Crumley, Paulette Crumley, Sharon Cotner, Tommy Gee, Tommy Bodine, Mary Ella Stone, and Betty Campbell.

Reapportionment May Be Settled By A Computer

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri's thorniest legislative problem -- reapprotionment of its House of Representatives - may be solved with a slide-rule.

At least this is the hope of Rep. Earl Bollinger, D-Madison County.

Bollinger explained his plan for a "weighted vote" Tuesday night before a legislative committee.

One of a number of plans advanced to meet the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote decision, Bollinger's proposal would maintain the present number of representative districts, but give the representative a fractional vote depending on the number of constituents.

For example, a representative from sparsely populated Worth County would have 2-16ths of a vote. A district representative from St. Louis would have 15 1/2 votes.

An alternative means of calculating the weight of the vote would give the Worth County representative one vote. The St. Louis legislator would have 15 1/2 votes.

Under the sixteenth systems, the House would have a total tally of 2607 -16 - or 162 15-16 votes. The other system would yield a total of 1303 1/2 votes.

Bollinger siad that even though the plan is complicated, it would preserve the identity of rural counties. He said he is opposed to grouping several counties in one district.

Despite the levity the measure has triggered, Bollinger said he introduced it and will support it sincerely.

Also posed was the problem of tabulating the votes in the House. Bollinger said a computer would have to be installed on the electronic board in the House. It would do away with voice votes, he admitted.

Also discussed by the committee was a "back-stop" bill" to set up a system for electing representatives at large if no reapportionment measure passes this session and an at large election is ordered by the courts.

Offered by Rep. R. J. Bus; King, R-St. Louis County, the measure calls for Democratic and Republican conventions to nominate 108 candidates for the House.

The 108-candidate restriction would protect the minority party from a clean sweep in an at-large election.

Rep. Alfred A. Speer, R-St. Louis County, who presented the bill for King, said it would reduce the "unbelievable chaos" which might occur if an at-large election were necessary.

It was patterned after a system used in Illinois, he said.

The House Agriculture Committee revived and approved a bill to prohibit open range in the few remaining counties where it still exists.

The bill was defeated by a narrow margin a week ago.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Wednesday, April 7 is Bluebeard's Wedding Anniversary.

To the man on the street, the initials "M. . S" can stand for many things: a manuscript, a master of science, a master in surgery. To an estimated 50,000 of our fellow Americans, though, stricken and disabled in the years between 20 and 40, the initials MS stand for just one thing. . . multiple sclerosis, a disabling disease of the brain and spinal cord, known as the great crippler of young adults.

These young men and women, mothers and fathers, husbands and wives, face a future filled with the burdens the MS-imposed chronic disability brings: a future marked by increased inability to work, to play, to enjoy those pleasures of young adulthood which most of us take completely for granted.

And what of their families?. . . husbands financially devastated by a wife's need for special, 'round-the-clock nursing service. . . wives who must turn breadwinner simply to provide life's bare necessities . . . children who must -- do -- assume the responsibilities of the adult world long before their time. If there are about a half-million actual victims of MS and related diseases, then, by today's population figures alone, there are more than two-and-a-half million Americans either directly or indirectly afflicted with multiple sclerosis.

Cause, cure and prevention for MS remain unknown. Scientists do, however, know what happens when MS strikes. Briefly, and in layman's terms, multiple sclerosis attacks the substance which protects nerve fibers in the brain and spinal cord. Patches of this substance break down and seem to disappear into the surrounding tissue. Scar tissue plaques form over the denuded nerve fibers. During the process nerve message impulses are shorted out, distorted, sometimes even blocked. Functions of seeing, walking, speaking, movement and balance are affected. Total disability can be the result.

No one disputes the fact that multiple sclerosis must be conquered, and soon, if succeeding generations are to be spared its physical and emotional torment. Last year, President Lyndon Johnson himself inaugurated the campaign against MS with these words: "Multiple sclerosis is a crippler and we cannot rest in this country until we have conquered it." Wonderful words for a noteworthy cause.

It remains, however, for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and its chapters to assume the total task of conquest over MS. The only national voluntary health agency concerned with the whole problem of MS, the Society has spent nearly sixty cents out of every dollar received at national headquarters for its research and scientific programs. Since its inception in 1946, the Society has spent more than four-and-a-half million dollars on research, has provided research fellowship grants to swell the ranks of researchers and educators.

Now the goal is in sight. At last, researchers are convinced MS will be conquered sometime in the not-to-distant future, perhaps in all of our lifetimes. That will be a happy day, indeed. But there's no value to us -- to you or me -- in our sitting back simply to let that happen. Since the Society has undertaken to conquer MS and has dedicated that victory to all of us, then all of must make ourselves worthy of that dedication and that victory. We must support the Society this year as never before either with money or our time, to share the cause, the fight, the victory over multiple sclerosis -- the great crippler of young adults.

Right-to-work laws may be a tremendous incentive to economic growth. A PROFIT VENTURE

A wise man once said that advertising is not a social venture. He then went on to point out that it was a "profit venture."

How right.

Advertisers should never allow friendship to eat into their advertising program.

Actually, there is nothing new about the idea the man expressed. Like gospel, however, it needs to be said every once in a while to keep merchants reminded of the basic fact that they should not spend advertising money to entertain the public, please friends, hear their daughter play the piano or help the aid society.

Donations may be necessary from time to time but they are not advertising.

Whenever you advertise, advertise to make a profit.

Although the Congress is being told that the nation's businessmen are opposed to any type of Federal aid to education, there is some doubt as to just what businessmen are opposed.

Last session of the Congress the nationwide membership of the National Federation of Independent Business voted on a bill introduced by Rep. William Dorn (South Carolina) which would have returned to the states for use in their schools only 5% of the Federal tax collections.

Even though the independent business proprietors were told that this would reach a total of about $5 billion, 63% voted in favor, with 31% opposed and 6% undecided.

This bill, if passed, would provide more money for education than current bills before the Congress. Thus, there seems to be a majority support among businessmen for a type of Federal aid to education that gives the states the money with no control over curriculum or instruction methods from the Federal government.

In view of this voted attitude by the independent businessmen, expressed by individually signed ballots, if there is any segment of businessmen opposing Federal aid to education, this could illustrate one of the areas in which there are apparently irreconcilable differences between the viewpoints of the independent small business proprietor and the management of the nation's larger corporate complexes.

Historically the independent businessman has been in the forefront of the effort to supply adequate education in his community, often because he is also a parent. Corporate officers, on the other hand, situated in commercial capitals, are more remote from the scene and perhaps only look upon education as a means of training the technological skills used in their operations.

However, largely overlooked in the entire discussion of education needs and what role Federal funds should be used to participate in them is the fact that the Federal government is currently already spending about $2-1/2 billion on education.

The impact of this expenditure is perhaps minimized by the fact that this money total involves some 42 departments, agencies and bureaus of the Federal government, including such diverse units as the Department of Agriculture, State department, the foreign aid agency, and the U. S. Information agency.

This was brought up in an exhaustive report issued on the subject in 1963 by Rep. Edith Green (Oregon.)

In her report she states, "In two, and only two, agencies of the Federal government, education is the agency's primary concern. These are the Office of Education, founded in 1867, and now a division of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the National Science Foundation, established in 1950 as an independent agency 'to develop and encourage basic research and education in the sciences'.

Congresswoman Green also pointed out that some 13 Senate Committees and 19 committees in the House are involved in educational matters, commenting "the diffused jurisdiction over education legislation leads to some inconsistencies and overlapping".

She points out that in the 87th Congress general scholarship legislation was considered by the Committee on Education and Labor, but scholarships for veterans came under the Veterans Committee, for medical students and nurses under the Commerce Committee and three other committees were also involved in this scholarship matter.

She also pointed out that the school lunch and milk program are administered by the Department of Agriculture, but in the House the school lunch program is under the jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee, while the school milk program is under the Agriculture Committee.

With some degree of understatement, Rep. Green wrote, "The diffusion of responsibility for educational programs in the Congress makes it difficult for any one committee, subcommittee, or individual member to ascertain the overall achievements of the government's existing programs, or the overall affects of proposals for changes in them."

Obviously, with so many hands in the funds, there must be overlapping and wastage. The administrative costs of 42 different departments are bound to be higher than those of a single agency. Thus there seems to be a substantial question of how much of the more than $2 billion already being spent filters down to the students, and how much is retained for duplicating administrative costs.

The voting of the independent businessmen shows that they favor good schools, yet other votes show them also strongly in favor of economy in government. It would appear that both objectives can be attained in this case by government making a concerted effort.

Next to locking the doors and shutting off the telephone, the quickest way to privacy and solitude in this modern urban world is to take a walk.

An automobile offers a kind of privacy but the driver must be so alert to traffic hazards that a joyride is no longer relaxing.

In walking, particularly on a Sunday or holiday, you are usually completely alone. Few walk. The autos pile up at crossings, headed one knows not where, but presumably as far away from home as their drivers can get.

The walker enjoys an exclusiveness equal to that conferred on royalty in ancient days, a privilege valued by few in a democracy, alas.

PAY-DAY FOR THE JOBLESS

Administration ears-to-the-ground are hearing welcome applause from across the nation in anticipation of the cuts in wartime excise taxes on "luxuries" that the President has promised.

It's been a long time since V-J Day and citizens have long taken a dim view of taxes designed to put a damper on sales and production and release workers for the war effort. Their continuance in the face of wide unemployment is insupportable when repeal would give the whole economy the fresh impetus needed to take up the slack -- and offset through business and personal incomes the immediate revenue losses.

There should be no question of WHICH of these nuisance taxes to repeal. ALL should go -- as a matter of justice and equity as well as economics. Take automobiles, for instance, the most widely used form of transportation of people. The special wartime excise taxes on other forms of personal transportation have been eliminated or reduced, but buyers of passenger cars are still paying a hidden excise tax averaging $225 on essential equipment that ceased being a luxury about the end of World War I.

Repeal of the auto excise tax would provide the greatest stimulus to sustained economic growth of any prospective cut. In spurring increased buying of both new and used cars it would increase employment directly in the industries involved in automotive production and indirectly in the countless others serving the users of automobiles -- a total of nearly 800,000 concerns in all.

Repeal would, in a year of 7.5 million production, add $1.7 billion of spendable money to the pants pockets of American consumers. This, certainly, is the sort of a shot-in-the-arm the President contemplated in his proposal for excise tax relief. The motor vehicle industry accounts for 15 per cent of our Gross National Product, employs ten million workers. In 1963, it used 22 per cent of our steel, 61 per cent of all rubber, 38 per cent of all zinc, 14 per cent of all aluminum and 50 per cent of all lead! It is a mighty supporter of the nation's industrial base.

Word that Congress was considering such repeal would, however, unless special precautions are taken, cause widespread deferment in buying. To avoid such a strain on the economy, any such announcement should include assurance that any tax cut will be retroactive to that date. Refunds to purchasers during the interim might be some burden on manufacturers and dealers, but infinitely preferable to a sales "holiday."

Gentlemen of the Congress, the nation is waiting.!

H. L. Hunt Says

WORTH OF THE DOLLAR

Draining away of the gold that supports our dollar is in the news again.

More and more of our foreign creditors are turning their holdings into gold instead of dollars, forcing us to weaken at a steady and ominous rate the foundation of the value of our currency. The latest step in the process has been to make available to foreign creditors all the gold reserves that have been held in support of the value of our bank deposits.

A desperate search for remedies to this problem is underway in Washington. There is talk of measures never before taken in free America --drastic limitations on foreign investment, even a "headtax" of $100 or more on every American who leaves the country to travel abroad.

Spending by American tourists outside the country, against which this proposal to destroy more of our personal liberty is aimed, totals about $2 billion a year. But our government takes nearly twice that amount each year from tax money for a single program of spending abroad. That program is foreign aid.

Foreign aid is the greatest single source of our imbalance of payments. Each year some $3 1/2 billion of "free gifts" flow from our shores to nearly every other nation in the world. No wonder the dollar is beginning to show the strain.

Yet this is one "sacred cow" that no plan for ending the gold drain touches. Instead, apparently, the freedom of our own people to travel will be sacrificed first. HLH

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(EDITOR'S NOTE -- Drew Pearson continues his report from Moscow on the new turn in American - Soviet relations.)

MOSCOW -- Soon after arriving in Moscow I found that you have to be careful about seeing old friends -- unless you want to get them fired. There remains a large reservoir of goodwill on the part of the Russian people toward the American people. But in official circles it doesn't pay to show it.

Furthermore if you are an American it doesn't pay to put Russian friends and acquaintances in jeopardy. The situation in Moscow is not unlike that which existed in Washington in the heyday of Joe McCarthy when State Department officials were afraid of recommending anything except a hard line toward the Soviet for fear of failing promotion or even being fired.

In Moscow today you don't talk to friends except in crowded restaurants where you can't be bugged or in automobiles or theatre lobbies or museums.

This is not true with members of the Central Committee or top officials who are secure in their positions. But it is true of important but lower-level officials hitherto very friendly to Americans.

Basic reason for this is a split inside the Kremlin over friendly relations with the United States, plus the American bombing of North Viet Nam.

FOR AND AGAINST USA

The Kremlin split was led by Mikhail Suslov on the anti-American side and by Nikita Khrushchev on the pro-American side. It was Suslov who led the move to oust Khrhshchev and worked backstage to roll up the votes against him in both the Presidium and the Central Committee. His ouster strengthened the hand of Suslov, long bitter against the United States.

Suslov's hand was strengthened much more, however, when President Johnson listened to a small group of Pentagon - White House advisers and launched his policy of bombing North Viet Nam. This, Suslov argued, justified his contention that you can't trust Americans, that coexistence with the United States is a sham and a delusion.

In the Presidium, Suslov is in charge of the Department of Agitation and Propaganda. Since the North Viet Nam bombing, additional agencies have been transferred to him, his authority has been strengthened, and one of his allies, Dmitry Ustinov, has been moved up to alternate membership in the powerful Presidium and appointed to the Central Committee Secretariat which controls the Communist party.

This is most significant. For Ustinov is Minister of Armaments. And his rise in power almost certainly means a military buildup and the scrapping of the gradual arms reduction which President Johnson has worked out with Khrushchev so successfully all during 1964.

Khrushchev had followed the "more - bang - for-a-buck" policy of President Eisenhower of concentrating on missiles, curtailing artillery, big land armies, and expensive military hardware. The Red Army, whose artillery is the finest in the world, has objected. But with Khrushchev in power they lost the argument.

Today, with American - hater Suslov tipping the balance of power inside the Kremlin and with Minister of Armaments Ustinov elevated to the Presidium, the Red Army is in a position to resume the arms race. The Marshals have argued that American striking power is now four to Russia's three, and they are determined to catch up.

In Russia there exists the same kind of liaison between the Army and Munitions Manufacturers as President Eisenhower warned against in the United States. In this country, defense contractors, though private, enjoy huge government subsidies and hire retired Generals and Admirals. In the Soviet, the Munition factories are government - owned, but each factory manager is ambitious to push his own plant, and the liaison between the military and the manufacturer is just as close as in the USA.

B AND K ARE JITTERY

What has handicapped the pro-American faction in the Kremlin is the fact that the North Viet Nam bombing came when the new Kremlin leaders, Breshev and Kosygin, are new, inexperienced and unsure of themselves.

Breshnev, head of the Communist party, and more important of the two, is charming, outgoing, a good speaker. He does not have Khrushchev's homey sense of humor or down-to-earth political techniques. But he is effective.

Kosygin, trained as a factory manager, is colorless, a poor speaker, unimaginative, but efficient. The two counterbalance each other, in time might make an excellent team

They have consistently advocated Khrushchev's line of coexistence. And they went just as far as Khrushchev in pushing gradual arms reduction. Last December they instructed Ambassador Dobrynin in Washington to go to the White House and ask whether President Johnson planned to trim his arms budget. The White House replied in the affirmative and gave some figures, warning that the budget would actually be trimmed more than appeared on the surface, because extra money would be spent for increased officers' salaries.

Kosygin then informed the Supreme Soviet that the United States was cutting its arms budget, therefore he proposed a similar cut.

This cooperation has now been scrapped, thanks almost entirely to our policy in Viet Nam and the bitter barrage from Red China, rubbing it home on Moscow that coexistence doesn't work, you can't trust the United States.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals today is having to listen to someone who has given up a bad habit.

Naturally, if you have sworn off sniffing glue, drinking martinis, or chain-smoking cigarettes, you must make your withdrawal pangs public.

The problem in social situations is to grab the conversation at the start. If you don't brag about the bad habit you're throttling, the other fellow will dire tales of his struggles.

When you have only a single bad habit and give it up utterly, it is usually replaced by another bad habit. This is known as Boyle's Law.

If you are restricted to one vice, perhaps it would be wiser to surrender it piecemeal. Mark Twain, an inveterate cigar man who lived into his 70s said he never had any trouble giving up smoking: "I've done it a thousand times."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Lyndon Johnson Tells Friends Some Labor Chiefs Pressure Him Too Much -- Too Often

Washington, D. C. -- With typical Johnsonian sensitivity, the President is beginning to resent the fashion and frequency with which some capital labor leaders are pressuring him personally.

Not too long ago several union chiefs came by to see him and, as he later related the story, "pounded" his desk. They wanted a big push on some legislation . Finally, for the first time in anger, he told them, in effect: okay, go it alone if you want; I'm president of the U. S. and I'll do it in my own due time.

Later, reminiscing over the incident, he told some friends that it reminded him of an old Texas adage:

"You know if you corner a steer," he said, "one of two thngs happens -- he jumps the fence or you get run over."

The President is not running over any labor leaders but he is eying the fence.

He admires some union leaders. As a political scientist he has a healthy respect for their political sagacity and machinery. He has an almost emotional affection for two or three of them.

But a handful does not make a movement -- and he believes that some have let him down and it is difficult to get an old-fashioned agreement with many others.

So he has backed away from labor crises into which the late John Kennedy and the erstwhile Secretary of Labor, now Justice Arthur Goldberg, would have plunged.

And with him President Johnson has taken the White House staff and Secretary of Labor Wirtz.

The President and some of his advisers of the Cabinet feel they've been "bludgeoned" recently when they tried to move in on the labor front.

President Johnson asked publicly that the unions stay within the economic guidelines when asking for increases. This was designed to keep new labor costs at no more than a 3.2 per cent increase. Walter Reuther's auto union cracked the line. Now the steel union has smashed it.

At first it appeared that the United Steelworkers of America would seek about $20 a week more. A week later, new demands totaled $40 more per week per man. This would cost the steel industry about a billion dollars a year more.

But now analyses show that actually the new union demands may cost double that figure. This would mean higher prices, more foreign competition and an outflow of U. S. gold to other countries to pay for foreign steel.

And there is little that is closer to the President's heart now than keeping the life-giving gold in Fort Knox.

There were other instances where the White House public appeals were rejected just as publicly. Early this year the President asked the longshoremen to all go back to work. They did not.

So the President now has backed off from active intervention despite a series of crises looming in the nation's major industries. Following the Chief's policy is Willard Wirtz, who now has become America's "Mr. Manpower," as well as special adviser to Mr. Johnson on other matters.

But they have a man on the labor front -- and he'll be out front more and more. The public would do well to learn of him.

He's the 58-year-old William E. Simkin, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and independent U.S. executive agency. Once, under President Eisenhower this was a powerful force. But it was weakened and obscured by the dynamic insider, Arthur Goldberg. Now "Mediation" is moving again.

Tipoff came when Mr. Simkin, a big six-footer still carrying the wound of his old college football days, was signaled by the White House to shift into the looming new waterfront battle. This is different from the recent dockside strike of longshoremen.

The new crisis will come on June 15 when all contracts covering sea-going men expire. I'm informed that a West Coast shipping strike is almost inevitable. And it looks rough on the East Coast. Such a stoppage -- over size of crews on newly - automated ships -- could cost the country more than the $3 billion washed out during the dockwallopers strike.

The assignment of Mr. Skimin to this turbulence is a sign of the times. It will be he who will be the administration's account executive in charge of strike crises.

Mr. Wirtz and the White House will move only in an extreme national emergency. The next step is Congress.

Obviously the President has not yet jumped the fence. But he sure is measuring it.

To the man on the street, the initials "M. . S" can stand for many things: a manuscript, a master of science, a master in surgery. To an estimated 50,000 of our fellow Americans, though, stricken and disabled in the years between 20 and 40, the initials MS stand for just one thing. . . multiple sclerosis, a disabling disease of the brain and spinal cord, known as the great crippler of young adults.

These young men and women, mothers and fathers, husbands and wives, face a future filled with the burdens the MS-imposed chronic disability brings: a future marked by increased inability to work, to play, to enjoy those pleasures of young adulthood which most of us take completely for granted.

And what of their families?. . . husbands financially devastated by a wife's need for special, 'round-the-clock nursing service. . . wives who must turn breadwinner simply to provide life's bare necessities . . . children who must -- do -- assume the responsibilities of the adult world long before their time. If there are about a half-million actual victims of MS and related diseases, then, by today's population figures alone, there are more than two-and-a-half million Americans either directly or indirectly afflicted with multiple sclerosis.

Cause, cure and prevention for MS remain unknown. Scientists do, however, know what happens when MS strikes. Briefly, and in layman's terms, multiple sclerosis attacks the substance which protects nerve fibers in the brain and spinal cord. Patches of this substance break down and seem to disappear into the surrounding tissue. Scar tissue plaques form over the denuded nerve fibers. During the process nerve message impulses are shorted out, distorted, sometimes even blocked. Functions of seeing, walking, speaking, movement and balance are affected. Total disability can be the result.

No one disputes the fact that multiple sclerosis must be conquered, and soon, if succeeding generations are to be spared its physical and emotional torment. Last year, President Lyndon Johnson himself inaugurated the campaign against MS with these words: "Multiple sclerosis is a crippler and we cannot rest in this country until we have conquered it." Wonderful words for a noteworthy cause.

It remains, however, for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and its chapters to assume the total task of conquest over MS. The only national voluntary health agency concerned with the whole problem of MS, the Society has spent nearly sixty cents out of every dollar received at national headquarters for its research and scientific programs. Since its inception in 1946, the Society has spent more than four-and-a-half million dollars on research, has provided research fellowship grants to swell the ranks of researchers and educators.

Now the goal is in sight. At last, researchers are convinced MS will be conquered sometime in the not-to-distant future, perhaps in all of our lifetimes. That will be a happy day, indeed. But there's no value to us -- to you or me -- in our sitting back simply to let that happen. Since the Society has undertaken to conquer MS and has dedicated that victory to all of us, then all of must make ourselves worthy of that dedication and that victory. We must support the Society this year as never before either with money or our time, to share the cause, the fight, the victory over multiple sclerosis -- the great crippler of young adults.

Right-to-work laws may be a tremendous incentive to economic growth. The National Right to Work Committee has compiled growth rate statistics comparing the nineteen right-to-work states with states which allow compulsory unionism, and the former lead in every category. A PROFIT VENTURE

A wise man once said that advertising is not a social venture. He then went on to point out that it was a "profit venture."

How right.

Advertisers should never allow friendship to eat into their advertising program.

Actually, there is nothing new about the idea the man expressed. Like gospel, however, it needs to be said every once in a while to keep merchants reminded of the basic fact that they should not spend advertising money to entertain the public, please friends, hear their daughter play the piano or help the aid society.

Donations may be necessary from time to time but they are not advertising.

Whenever you advertise, advertise to make a profit.

Although the Congress is being told that the nation's businessmen are opposed to any type of Federal aid to education, there is some doubt as to just what businessmen are opposed.

Last session of the Congress the nationwide membership of the National Federation of Independent Business voted on a bill introduced by Rep. William Dorn (South Carolina) which would have returned to the states for use in their schools only 5% of the Federal tax collections.

Even though the independent business proprietors were told that this would reach a total of about $5 billion, 63% voted in favor, with 31% opposed and 6% undecided.

This bill, if passed, would provide more money for education than current bills before the Congress. Thus, there seems to be a majority support among businessmen for a type of Federal aid to education that gives the states the money with no control over curriculum or instruction methods from the Federal government.

In view of this voted attitude by the independent businessmen, expressed by individually signed ballots, if there is any segment of businessmen opposing Federal aid to education, this could illustrate one of the areas in which there are apparently irreconcilable differences between the viewpoints of the independent small business proprietor and the management of the nation's larger corporate complexes.

Historically the independent businessman has been in the forefront of the effort to supply adequate education in his community, often because he is also a parent. Corporate officers, on the other hand, situated in commercial capitals, are more remote from the scene and perhaps only look upon education as a means of training the technological skills used in their operations.

However, largely overlooked in the entire discussion of education needs and what role Federal funds should be used to participate in them is the fact that the Federal government is currently already spending about $2-1/2 billion on education.

The impact of this expenditure is perhaps minimized by the fact that this money total involves some 42 departments, agencies and bureaus of the Federal government, including such diverse units as the Department of Agriculture, State department, the foreign aid agency, and the U. S. Information agency.

This was brought up in an exhaustive report issued on the subject in 1963 by Rep. Edith Green (Oregon.)

In her report she states, "In two, and only two, agencies of the Federal government, education is the agency's primary concern. These are the Office of Education, founded in 1867, and now a division of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the National Science Foundation, established in 1950 as an independent agency 'to develop and encourage basic research and education in the sciences'.

Congresswoman Green also pointed out that some 13 Senate Committees and 19 committees in the House are involved in educational matters, commenting "the diffused jurisdiction over education legislation leads to some inconsistencies and overlapping".

She points out that in the 87th Congress general scholarship legislation was considered by the Committee on Education and Labor, but scholarships for veterans came under the Veterans Committee, for medical students and nurses under the Commerce Committee and three other committees were also involved in this scholarship matter.

She also pointed out that the school lunch and milk program are administered by the Department of Agriculture, but in the House the school lunch program is under the jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee, while the school milk program is under the Agriculture Committee.

With some degree of understatement, Rep. Green wrote, "The diffusion of responsibility for educational programs in the Congress makes it difficult for any one committee, subcommittee, or individual member to ascertain the overall achievements of the government's existing programs, or the overall affects of proposals for changes in them."

Obviously, with so many hands in the funds, there must be overlapping and wastage. The administrative costs of 42 different departments are bound to be higher than those of a single agency. Thus there seems to be a substantial question of how much of the more than $2 billion already being spent filters down to the students, and how much is retained for duplicating administrative costs.

The voting of the independent businessmen shows that they favor good schools, yet other votes show them also strongly in favor of economy in government. It would appear that both objectives can be attained in this case by government making a concerted effort.

Next to locking the doors and shutting off the telephone, the quickest way to privacy and solitude in this modern urban world is to take a walk.

An automobile offers a kind of privacy but the driver must be so alert to traffic hazards that a joyride is no longer relaxing.

In walking, particularly on a Sunday or holiday, you are usually completely alone. Few walk. The autos pile up at crossings, headed one knows not where, but presumably as far away from home as their drivers can get.

The walker enjoys an exclusiveness equal to that conferred on royalty in ancient days, a privilege valued by few in a democracy, alas.

PAY-DAY FOR THE JOBLESS

Administration ears-to-the-ground are hearing welcome applause from across the nation in anticipation of the cuts in wartime excise taxes on "luxuries" that the President has promised.

It's been a long time since V-J Day and citizens have long taken a dim view of taxes designed to put a damper on sales and production and release workers for the war effort. Their continuance in the face of wide unemployment is insupportable when repeal would give the whole economy the fresh impetus needed to take up the slack -- and offset through business and personal incomes the immediate revenue losses.

There should be no question of WHICH of these nuisance taxes to repeal. ALL should go -- as a matter of justice and equity as well as economics. Take automobiles, for instance, the most widely used form of transportation of people. The special wartime excise taxes on other forms of personal transportation have been eliminated or reduced, but buyers of passenger cars are still paying a hidden excise tax averaging $225 on essential equipment that ceased being a luxury about the end of World War I.

Repeal of the auto excise tax would provide the greatest stimulus to sustained economic growth of any prospective cut. In spurring increased buying of both new and used cars it would increase employment directly in the industries involved in automotive production and indirectly in the countless others serving the users of automobiles -- a total of nearly 800,000 concerns in all.

Repeal would, in a year of 7.5 million production, add $1.7 billion of spendable money to the pants pockets of American consumers. This, certainly, is the sort of a shot-in-the-arm the President contemplated in his proposal for excise tax relief. The motor vehicle industry accounts for 15 per cent of our Gross National Product, employs ten million workers. In 1963, it used 22 per cent of our steel, 61 per cent of all rubber, 38 per cent of all zinc, 14 per cent of all aluminum and 50 per cent of all lead! It is a mighty supporter of the nation's industrial base.

Word that Congress was considering such repeal would, however, unless special precautions are taken, cause widespread deferment in buying. To avoid such a strain on the economy, any such announcement should include assurance that any tax cut will be retroactive to that date. Refunds to purchasers during the interim might be some burden on manufacturers and dealers, but infinitely preferable to a sales "holiday."

Gentlemen of the Congress, the nation is waiting.!

WORTH OF THE DOLLAR

Draining away of the gold that supports our dollar is in the news again.

More and more of our foreign creditors are turning their holdings into gold instead of dollars, forcing us to weaken at a steady and ominous rate the foundation of the value of our currency. The latest step in the process has been to make available to foreign creditors all the gold reserves that have been held in support of the value of our bank deposits.

A desperate search for remedies to this problem is underway in Washington. There is talk of measures never before taken in free America--drastic limitations on foreign investment, even a "headtax" of $100 or more on every American who leaves the country to travel abroad.

Spending by American tourists outside the country, against which this proposal to destroy more of our personal liberty is aimed, totals about $2 billion a year. But our government takes nearly twice that amount each year from tax money for a single program of spending abroad. That program is foreign aid.

Foreign aid is the greatest single source of our imbalance of payments. Each year some $3 1/2 billion of "free gifts" flow from our shores to nearly every other nation in the world. No wonder the dollar is beginning to show the strain.

Yet this is one "sacred cow" that no plan for ending the gold drain touches. Instead, apparently, the freedom of our own people to travel will be sacrificed first. HLH

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(EDITOR'S NOTE -- Drew Pearson continues his report from Moscow on the new turn in American - Soviet relations.)

MOSCOW -- Soon after arriving in Moscow I found that you have to be careful about seeing old friends -- unless you want to get them fired. There remains a large reservoir of goodwill on the part of the Russian people toward the American people. But in official circles it doesn't pay to show it.

Furthermore if you are an American it doesn't pay to put Russian friends and acquaintances in jeopardy. The situation in Moscow is not unlike that which existed in Washington in the heyday of Joe McCarthy when State Department officials were afraid of recommending anything except a hard line toward the Soviet for fear of failing promotion or even being fired.

In Moscow today you don't talk to friends except in crowded restaurants where you can't be bugged or in automobiles or theatre lobbies or museums.

This is not true with members of the Central Committee or top officials who are secure in their positions. But it is true of important but lower-level officials hitherto very friendly to Americans.

Basic reason for this is a split inside the Kremlin over friendly relations with the United States, plus the American bombing of North Viet Nam.

FOR AND AGAINST USA

The Kremlin split was led by Mikhail Suslov on the anti-American side and by Nikita Khrushchev on the pro-American side. It was Suslov who led the move to oust Khrhshchev and worked backstage to roll up the votes against him in both the Presidium and the Central Committee. His ouster strengthened the hand of Suslov, long bitter against the United States.

Suslov's hand was strengthened much more, however, when President Johnson listened to a small group of Pentagon - White House advisers and launched his policy of bombing North Viet Nam. This, Suslov argued, justified his contention that you can't trust Americans, that coexistence with the United States is a sham and a delusion.

In the Presidium, Suslov is in charge of the Department of Agitation and Propaganda. Since the North Viet Nam bombing, additional agencies have been transferred to him, his authority has been strengthened, and one of his allies, Dmitry Ustinov, has been moved up to alternate membership in the powerful Presidium and appointed to the Central Committee Secretariat which controls the Communist party.

This is most significant. For Ustinov is Minister of Armaments. And his rise in power almost certainly means a military buildup and the scrapping of the gradual arms reduction which President Johnson has worked out with Khrushchev so successfully all during 1964.

Khrushchev had followed the "more - bang - for-a-buck" policy of President Eisenhower of concentrating on missiles, curtailing artillery, big land armies, and expensive military hardware. The Red Army, whose artillery is the finest in the world, has objected. But with Khrushchev in power they lost the argument.

Today, with American - hater Suslov tipping the balance of power inside the Kremlin and with Minister of Armaments Ustinov elevated to the Presidium, the Red Army is in a position to resume the arms race. The Marshals have argued that American striking power is now four to Russia's three, and they are determined to catch up.

In Russia there exists the same kind of liaison between the Army and Munitions Manufacturers as President Eisenhower warned against in the United States. In this country, defense contractors, though private, enjoy huge government subsidies and hire retired Generals and Admirals. In the Soviet, the Munition factories are government - owned, but each factory manager is ambitious to push his own plant, and the liaison between the military and the manufacturer is just as close as in the USA.

B AND K ARE JITTERY

What has handicapped the pro-American faction in the Kremlin is the fact that the North Viet Nam bombing came when the new Kremlin leaders, Breshev and Kosygin, are new, inexperienced and unsure of themselves.

Breshnev, head of the Communist party, and more important of the two, is charming, outgoing, a good speaker. He does not have Khrushchev's homey sense of humor or down-to-earth political techniques. But he is effective.

Kosygin, trained as a factory manager, is colorless, a poor speaker, unimaginative, but efficient. The two counterbalance each other, in time might make an excellent team

They have consistently advocated Khrushchev's line of coexistence. And they went just as far as Khrushchev in pushing gradual arms reduction. Last December they instructed Ambassador Dobrynin in Washington to go to the White House and ask whether President Johnson planned to trim his arms budget. The White House replied in the affirmative and gave some figures, warning that the budget would actually be trimmed more than appeared on the surface, because extra money would be spent for increased officers' salaries.

Kosygin then informed the Supreme Soviet that the United States was cutting its arms budget, therefore he proposed a similar cut.

This cooperation has now been scrapped, thanks almost entirely to our policy in Viet Nam and the bitter barrage from Red China, rubbing it home on Moscow that coexistence doesn't work, you can't trust the United States.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Lyndon Johnson Tells Friends Some Labor Chiefs Pressure Him Too Much -- Too Often

Washington, D. C. -- With typical Johnsonian sensitivity, the President is beginning to resent the fashion and frequency with which some capital labor leaders are pressuring him personally.

Not too long ago several union chiefs came by to see him and, as he later related the story, "pounded" his desk. They wanted a big push on some legislation . Finally, for the first time in anger, he told them, in effect: okay, go it alone if you want; I'm president of the U. S. and I'll do it in my own due time.

Later, reminiscing over the incident, he told some friends that it reminded him of an old Texas adage:

"You know if you corner a steer," he said, "one of two thngs happens -- he jumps the fence or you get run over."

The President is not running over any labor leaders but he is eying the fence.

He admires some union leaders. As a political scientist he has a healthy respect for their political sagacity and machinery. He has an almost emotional affection for two or three of them.

But a handful does not make a movement -- and he believes that some have let him down and it is difficult to get an old-fashioned agreement with many others.

So he has backed away from labor crises into which the late John Kennedy and the erstwhile Secretary of Labor, now Justice Arthur Goldberg, would have plunged.

And with him President Johnson has taken the White House staff and Secretary of Labor Wirtz.

The President and some of his advisers of the Cabinet feel they've been "bludgeoned" recently when they tried to move in on the labor front.

President Johnson asked publicly that the unions stay within the economic guidelines when asking for increases. This was designed to keep new labor costs at no more than a 3.2 per cent increase. Walter Reuther's auto union cracked the line. Now the steel union has smashed it.

At first it appeared that the United Steelworkers of America would seek about $20 a week more. A week later, new demands totaled $40 more per week per man. This would cost the steel industry about a billion dollars a year more.

But now analyses show that actually the new union demands may cost double that figure. This would mean higher prices, more foreign competition and an outflow of U. S. gold to other countries to pay for foreign steel.

And there is little that is closer to the President's heart now than keeping the life-giving gold in Fort Knox.

There were other instances where the White House public appeals were rejected just as publicly. Early this year the President asked the longshoremen to all go back to work. They did not.

So the President now has backed off from active intervention despite a series of crises looming in the nation's major industries. Following the Chief's policy is Willard Wirtz, who now has become America's "Mr. Manpower," as well as special adviser to Mr. Johnson on other matters.

But they have a man on the labor front -- and he'll be out front more and more. The public would do well to learn of him.

He's the 58-year-old William E. Simkin, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and independent U.S. executive agency. Once, under President Eisenhower this was a powerful force. But it was weakened and obscured by the dynamic insider, Arthur Goldberg. Now "Mediation" is moving again.

Tipoff came when Mr. Simkin, a big six-footer still carrying the wound of his old college football days, was signaled by the White House to shift into the looming new waterfront battle. This is different from the recent dockside strike of longshoremen.

The new crisis will come on June 15 when all contracts covering sea-going men expire. I'm informed that a West Coast shipping strike is almost inevitable. And it looks rough on the East Coast. Such a stoppage -- over size of crews on newly - automated ships -- could cost the country more than the $3 billion washed out during the dockwalloper s strike.

The assignment of Mr. Skimin to this turbulence is a sign of the times. It will be he who will be the administration's account executive in charge of strike crises.

Mr. Wirtz and the White House will move only in an extreme national emergency. The next step is Congress.

Obviously the President has not yet jumped the fence. But he sure is measuring it.

Spring Clean-Up Tips

In the basement make sure that combustibles are not stored near the heating unit.

And, check the whole basement area for combustibles you no longer need. Old empty paint cans and worn out brushes should be thrown out, and all paint you still need should be stored in covered metal cans. Old newspapers should be thrown out, and if you have a large accumulation of them, you can remove the fire hazard by giving them to some charitable organization.

If you have a coal furnace, ashes should be kept in a metal container equipped with a cover.

Don't forget the garage. If oil has dripped on the floor, clean it up and scrub the floor well. If you have gasoline for use in a power mower or outboard motor, it should be stored in a safety type can with self-closing caps on the openings.

If your garage is attached to the house, and there is an entrance from the house to the garage, the two should be kept separated by a tight - fitting door, and the door should be kept closed when not in use.

Your Clean-Up job, of course, includes the yard. Rake up all leaves and dry grass and dispose of them.

If you are thinking of burning leaves, check with the local police or fire department. In many towns and cities the burning of leaves in the open is prohibited or allowed only by permit.

If you are permitted to burn leaves, burn them well away from buildings, wooden fences and other structures. Before starting the fire, hook up the garden hose so that it will be handy if the fire appears to be getting out of hand. Don't permit children to play near the fire.

And, never, never, never burn leaves on a windy day.

Look for more Spring Clean-Up Tips tomorrow.

Spring Clean-Up Tips

In the basement make sure that combustibles are not stored near the heating unit.

And, check the whole basement area for combustibles you no longer need. Old empty paint cans and worn out brushes should be thrown out, and all paint you still need should be stored in covered metal cans. Old newspapers should be thrown out, and if you have a large accumulation of them, you can remove the fire hazard by giving them to some charitable organization.

If you have a coal furnace, ashes should be kept in a metal container equipped with a cover.

Don't forget the garage. If oil has dripped on the floor, clean it up and scrub the floor well. If you have gasoline for use in a power mower or outboard motor, it should be stored in a safety type can with self-closing caps on the openings.

If your garage is attached to the house, and there is an entrance from the house to the garage, the two should be kept separated by a tight - fitting door, and the door should be kept closed when not in use.

Your Clean-Up job, of course, includes the yard. Rake up all leaves and dry grass and dispose of them.

If you are thinking of burning leaves, check with the local police or fire department. In many towns and cities the burning of leaves in the open is prohibited or allowed only by permit.

If you are permitted to burn leaves, burn them well away from buildings, wooden fences and other structures. Before starting the fire, hook up the garden hose so that it will be handy if the fire appears to be getting out of hand. Don't permit children to play near the fire.

And, never, never, never burn leaves on a windy day.

Look for more Spring Clean-Up Tips tomorrow.

Drysdale Opens Attack To Gain Hard Victory

Don Drysdale, who had traveled this route before, was getting nowhere fast again. You'd think a guy would learn that batting his skull against the stone wall that is the Los Angeles Dodger attack, gets you nothing but a headache. But Drysdale. . .well, some guys just don't learn.

The lanky Dodger right-hander couldn't have forgotten the six losses he was tagged with last season when the Dodgers failed to get him a single run.

But Drysdale trudged out to the mound just the same Tuesday night. He throttled the New York Yankees for five innings and there he was, leading off the sixth against Bill Stafford, in a 0-0 tie.

Drysdale is a stubborn sort, though. He wasn't about to be shut out again, even if his club hadn't scored in 17 innings. He parked one of Stafford's serves over the left field fence to break the spell.

Flushed with success, the Dodgers assaulted rookie Gil Blanco for another run in the seventh - this one on Al Ferrara's pinch homer - and Drysdale made the runs stand up for a 2-0 victory.

The seven - hitter was Drysdale's fifth victory against no losses this complete -game victory for the Dodger staff. Sandy Koufax lost two route-going performances earlier.

The Braves battled 12 innings before losing to Washington 2-1. Catcher Mike Brumley had four hits and scored the winning run in the 12th when he doubled and then raced home on Sandy Alomar's throwing error.

Richie Allen, Philadelphia's Rookie of the Year last season, homered and doubled as the Phillies ripped Kansas City 5-1.

In other games, Houston beat Minnesota 2-1, San Francisco clipped the Los Angeles Angels 6-2, Detroit shelled Cincinnati 7-2, St. Louis downed Baltimore 3-1, Cleveland dropped Boston 5-4 and the Chicago White Sox split into two squads which defeated Pittsburgh 7-6 and the New York Mets 3-1.

Auerbach Smolders After Loss

PHILADELPHIA AP -- Red Auerbach was smoking Tuesday night but it wasn't his usual victory cigar.

The smoke was coming out o the ears of the Boston Celtics' coach after his team lost, 109-103 to the Philadelphia 76ers and sent the two teams back to Boston tied 1-1 in the best-of-7 series of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division final playoffs.

The Western Division final playoffs resume tonight with Los Angeles at Baltimore. The Lakers won the first two games of the series on the West Coast.

"This is a snakepit," Auerbach said of Convention Hall, the 76ers' home court. "It's a bush town. I've never liked it. They give you 10 orange juices for 11 guys."

"Okay, Red," said one observer. "So it's a snakepit, and bush, and you got only 10 orange juices, but how about that guy, Wilt Chamberlain."

Chamberlain, the 7-foot-1 star of the 76ers, was slightly juiced up himself. He scored 30 points, took down 39 rebounds, blocked eight shots and handed out eight assists. He simply overpowered the Celtics' Bill Russell, the NBA's Most Valuable Player.

Russell managed 12 points, 16 rebounds, had five assists.

Sam Jones, with 40 points, topped the defending NBA champions.

The third game in the series will be played at Boston Thursday night.

Contenders Feel That Golf Tournament Will Be Won On The Greens

AUGUSTA, Ga. AP -- Most of the top contenders here for the Masters Golf Tournament starting Thursday feel the championship will be won on the greens.

Jack Nicklaus, the long-hitting bomber and the 4-1 choice in this elite, international field of 93, doesn't agree entirely. "You still got to get there," said the 25-year-old husky from Columbus, Ohio, today.

Nicklaus, a nonwinner this year, served notice Tuesday that he appears fit and ready to break into the winner's circle. He unleashed a five-under-par 67 for the par 36-36-72, 6,980-yard Augusta National Golf Club layout on a hot and sunny afternoon.

The 5-foot-11, 200 -pounder closed out a round that included eight birdies and three bogeys by holing out a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe back of the green.

"It was a good round," said Nicklaus "but my short game was sloppy."

It was Nicklaus' first tour of the course since he left to spend the weekend with his family in Columbus. He had whipped the course five times last week with rounds of 68, 69,68, 68 and 70.

"I left because I didn't want to stay here too long and get stale," said the smiling and jovial 1963 Masters king. "I preferred to work on my game last week before the crowds came and so I wouldn't be bothered. I practiced before and after each round."

Asked to name five chief contenders, Nicklaus pondered and then named defending champion Arnold Palmer, South African Gary Player, Australia's Bruce Devlin, Tony Lema and Billy Casper.

Palmer, who expressed concern over his driving and putting, picked Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Devlin, Casper and Lema to give him the most trouble.

The defending king and record four-time winner is the 6-1 second choice behind Nicklaus for the four-day 72-hole tournament. Sanders, Lema, Casper and Player are bracketed at 8-1 in the informal odds.

"Then you can't count anyone out of this tournament," added Palmer." They have to be good to make it in the first place.

Bulldogs Win At Charleston

The Sikeston High School Bulldogs met head on with four other area teams yesterday in the Charleston Invitational Track and Field Tourney.

Charleston had 10 first place finishers compared to two for East Prairie, 1 for Jackson. Perryville had no finishers in the winners circle. Sikeston had the dominant athletes in two events finishing first in the broad jump led by Jim Kiehne and in the high jump with a fine effort by Blackman.

Here are the team and individual scores for the meet; Charleston 92, Sikeston 79 1/2, East Prairie 34, Jackson 22 1/2, Perryville 10.

Citation Gets Statue In His Honor

LEXINGTON, Ky. AP -- It has been 14 years since Citation quit racing for a more leisurely life at Calumet Farm, but many racing fans remember how the big bay humbled his rivals on America's tracks.

Tourists stream through Calumet's devil - red and white gate-800 to 1,000 daily during the spring and summer-and most of them are there to see Citation.

Citation recently topped the voting in a poll to determine the best runner to compete at Hialeah Park in the 40 years the Florida track has been operating. A bronze statue was unveiled in his honor.

The recognition isn't surprising to Hugh Fields, who has cared for Citation since he was retired in 1951 to the 850-acre showplace near Lexington.

"He's the greatest, that's all." said Fields.

The admiration is mutual. Citation, last to win the Triple Crown-the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes of 1948-is a "one man horse".

Sometimes the 53-year-old Fields is called to work on his off day because Citation refuses to return to his stall in the stud barn.

Fields opened the stall door so a visitor could get a better view of the handsome animal.

"Look at him," Fields said. "Cy has one of the most intelligent heads I've ever seen on a horse. He knows what's going on."

The big horse stood quietly. He didn't need to be tied. All the while Fields kept busy chatting and brushing Cy's coat.

Fields conceded that Citation has a fault that is not uncommon to middle-aged humans.

"He likes to eat too much and we have him on a mild diet," Fields said.

Citation's weight has gone to 1,350 pounds from the 1,100 he carried while becoming the first thoroughbred millionaire.

Except in midsummer, Citation is led out of his stall at 7 a.m. daily for exercise. He is back in his stall at 1 p.m. The routine changes at midsummer. He is turned out at 3 p.m. and is left in the cool paddock until 8 o'clock the next morning. He is never left unattended. A night watchman comes on duty at 6 p.m. and stays until relieved.

Through 1964, horses sired by Citation have earned $2,868,-106. Among his 212 foals to reach racing age were 12 stakes winners and 110 other winners. His stud fee is $3,500.

When Citation, the son of Bull Lea-Hydroplane II, retired he left a four-year racing record of 32 wins, 10 seconds, and two thirds in 45 starts and earnings of $1,085,760.

After winning the Belmont with Citation, jockey Eddie Arcaro said, "I let him run a little bit on the turn and he went so fast he scared me. I took hold of him again."

Court Styles Come and Go; Iba Is True to His Fashion

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) Hank Iba's basketball players at Oklahoma State certainly no different from other college students dance the Watusi instead of the Lindy, listen to the Beatles instead of Glenn Miller and they travel in DC-8s not Ford Tri-Motors.

Aside from that, everything about Oklahoma State University's basketball team is strictly out of the 1930s.

Hank Iba took over as coach in Stillwater, Okla., in 1934, and from the beginning Oklahoma State's trade marks have been possession ball and good defense.

Thirty seasons later, despite a 360-degree change in basketball styles, the same combination is working perfectly for Iba who has another excellent team, one that could end up Big Eight champion.

Just to prove his methods aren't outdated, Iba was the coach of the 1964 U.S. Olympic team that won in Tokyo last fall.

"I really learned from him," said Lucious Jackson, one of the Olympians who is a rookie now with the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association.

"He gets on one thing and he stresses that point until everyone knows it. It doesn't matter if it's offense or defense. You have to learn it.

"I suppose that's why his teams at Oklahoma State play such deliberate ball. When they're on offense they have the plays down so well they can just wait for the good opportunity.

"Defensively, he just told us we wouldn't win if we didn't play it right. He said it was the key, and everybody knew it. He started with a few fundamentals and worked from there. It turned out he was right."

At Oklahoma State where Iba produced back-to-back NCAA championship teams in 1945 and '46, defense and ball control are just accepted parts of the basketball program.

"An awful lot of people give lip service to defense in basketball," Iba has said, "but we work at it in Stillwater.

"Here is our chief contention—airtight defense will get you there more often than a high-geared offense. The point is this: I don't care how good some 'shooting' team is, the offense of that club will fluctuate by a much wider margin than will a defense as good as ours ordinarily is.

"Why, some variations will amount to as much as 10 or 15 points per night. It's even more so now than in the past because teams are losing the ball a lot more these days. That's due to the change in the game. We don't have passers any more.

"On our poor nights we figure our defense will carry us. Consistency is our main theme, and we like to think that our game develops a clear, methodical kind of thinker.

"Our man has a good reason for everything he does on that court. He does nothing on impulse; he follows his mind's good reasoning.

"Here is our prevailing motto: 'Think and then act. Never act, and then alibi.'"

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why are the U.S. Constitution and the Declaration of Independence kept in helium-filled glass cases?

A—Helium, an inert gas, protects the documents from atmospheric dangers. The documents are written on sheepskin parchments, which would be subject to attack by gases in air, damage by light or by humidity or dryness in air. The glass cases have special filters to protect the parchments from damage by ultraviolet radiation from light.

Q—How many of our presidents had no children?

A— Six—Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Harding, and Buchanan, the latter a bachelor.

Together they create quite a stir.

Auerbach Smolders After Loss

PHILADELPHIA AP -- Red Auerbach was smoking Tuesday night but it wasn't his usual victory cigar.

The smoke was coming out o the ears of the Boston Celtics' coach after his team lost, 109-103 to the Philadelphia 76ers and sent the two teams back to Boston tied 1-1 in the best-of-7 series of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division final playoffs.

The Western Division final playoffs resume tonight with Los Angeles at Baltimore. The Lakers won the first two games of the series on the West Coast.

"This is a snakepit," Auerbach said of Convention Hall, the 76ers' home court. "It's a bush town. I've never liked it. They give you 10 orange juices for 11 guys."

"Okay, Red," said one observer. "So it's a snakepit, and bush, and you got only 10 orange juices, but how about that guy, Wilt Chamberlain."

Chamberlain, the 7-foot-1 star of the 76ers, was slightly juiced up himself. He scored 30 points, took down 39 rebounds, blocked eight shots and handed out eight assists. He simply overpowered the Celtics' Bill Russell, the NBA's Most Valuable Player.

Russell managed 12 points, 16 rebounds, had five assists.

Sam Jones, with 40 points, topped the defending NBA champions.

The third game in the series will be played at Boston Thursday night.

Contenders Feel That Golf Tournament Will Be Won On The Greens

AUGUSTA, Ga. AP -- Most of the top contenders here for the Masters Golf Tournament starting Thursday feel the championship will be won on the greens.

Jack Nicklaus, the long-hitting bomber and the 4-1 choice in this elite, international field of 93, doesn't agree entirely. "You still got to get there," said the 25-year-old husky from Columbus, Ohio, today.

Nicklaus, a nonwinner this year, served notice Tuesday that he appears fit and ready to break into the winner's circle. He unleashed a five-under-par 67 for the par 36-36-72, 6,980-yard Augusta National Golf Club layout on a hot and sunny afternoon.

The 5-foot-11, 200 -pounder closed out a round that included eight birdies and three bogeys by holing out a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe back of the green.

"It was a good round," said Nicklaus "but my short game was sloppy."

It was Nicklaus' first tour of the course since he left to spend the weekend with his family in Columbus. He had whipped the course five times last week with rounds of 68, 69,68, 68 and 70.

"I left because I didn't want to stay here too long and get stale," said the smiling and jovial 1963 Masters king. "I preferred to work on my game last week before the crowds came and so I wouldn't be bothered. I practiced before and after each round."

Asked to name five chief contenders, Nicklaus pondered and then named defending champion Arnold Palmer, South African Gary Player, Australia's Bruce Devlin, Tony Lema and Billy Casper.

Palmer, who expressed concern over his driving and putting, picked Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Devlin, Casper and Lema to give him the most trouble.

The defending king and record four-time winner is the 6-1 second choice behind Nicklaus for the four-day 72-hole tournament. Sanders, Lema, Casper and Player are bracketed at 8-1 in the informal odds.

"Then you can't count anyone out of this tournament," added Palmer." They have to be good to make it in the first place.

Citation Gets Statue In His Honor

LEXINGTON, Ky. AP -- It has been 14 years since Citation quit racing for a more leisurely life at Calumet Farm, but many racing fans remember how the big bay humbled his rivals on America's tracks.

Tourists stream through Calumet's devil - red and white gate-800 to 1,000 daily during the spring and summer-and most of them are there to see Citation.

Citation recently topped the voting in a poll to determine the best runner to compete at Hialeah Park in the 40 years the Florida track has been operating. A bronze statue was unveiled in his honor.

The recognition isn't surprising to Hugh Fields, who has cared for Citation since he was retired in 1951 to the 850-acre showplace near Lexington.

"He's the greatest, that's all." said Fields.

The admiration is mutual. Citation, last to win the Triple Crown-the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes of 1948-is a "one man horse".

Sometimes the 53-year-old Fields is called to work on his off day because Citation refuses to return to his stall in the stud barn.

Fields opened the stall door so a visitor could get a better view of the handsome animal.

"Look at him," Fields said. "Cy has one of the most intelligent heads I've ever seen on a horse. He knows what's going on."

The big horse stood quietly. He didn't need to be tied. All the while Fields kept busy chatting and brushing Cy's coat.

Fields conceded that Citation has a fault that is not uncommon to middle-aged humans.

"He likes to eat too much and we have him on a mild diet," Fields said.

Citation's weight has gone to 1,350 pounds from the 1,100 he carried while becoming the first thoroughbred millionaire.

Except in midsummer, Citation is led out of his stall at 7 a.m. daily for exercise. He is back in his stall at 1 p.m. The routine changes at midsummer. He is turned out at 3 p.m. and is left in the cool paddock until 8 o'clock the next morning.

He is never left unattended. A night watchman comes on duty at 6 p.m. and stays until relieved.

Through 1964, horses sired by Citation have earned $2,868,-106. Among his 212 foals to reach racing age were 12 stakes winners and 110 other winners. His stud fee is $3,500.

When Citation, the son of Bull Lea-Hydroplane II, retired he left a four-year racing record of 32 wins, 10 seconds, and two thirds in 45 starts and earnings of $1,085,760.

After winning the Belmont with Citation, jockey Eddie Arcaro said, "I let him run a little bit on the turn and he went so fast he scared me. I took hold of him again."

Court Styles Come and Go; Iba Is True to His Fashion

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Hank Iba's basketball players at Oklahoma State certainly no different from other college students dance the Watusi instead of the Lindy, listen to the Beatles instead of Glenn Miller and they travel in DC-8s not Ford Tri-Motors.

Aside from that, everything about Oklahoma State University's basketball team is strictly out of the 1930s.

Hank Iba took over as coach in Stillwater, Okla., in 1934, and from the beginning Oklahoma State's trade marks have been possession ball and good defense.

Thirty seasons later, despite a 360-degree change in basketball styles, the same combination is working perfectly for Iba who has another excellent team, one that could end up Big Eight champion.

Just to prove his methods aren't outdated, Iba was the coach of the 1964 U.S. Olympic team that won in Tokyo last fall.

"I really learned from him," said Lucious Jackson, one of the Olympians who is a rookie now with the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association.

"He gets on one thing and he stresses that point until everyone knows it. It doesn't matter if it's offense or defense. You have to learn it.

"I suppose that's why his teams at Oklahoma State play such deliberate ball. When they're on offense they have the plays down so well they can just wait for the good opportunity.

"Defensively, he just told us we wouldn't win if we didn't play it right. He said it was the key, and everybody knew it. He started with a few fundamentals and worked from there. It turned out he was right."

At Oklahoma State where Iba produced back-to-back NCAA championship teams in 1945 and '46, defense and ball control are just accepted parts of the basketball program.

"An awful lot of people give lip service to defense in basketball," Iba has said, "but we work at it in Stillwater.

"Here is our chief contention—airtight defense will get you there more often than a high-geared offense. The point is this: I don't care how good some 'shooting' team is, the offense of that club will fluctuate by a much wider margin than will a defense as good as ours ordinarily is.

"Why, some variations will amount to as much as 10 or 15 points per night. It's even more so now than in the past because teams are losing the ball a lot more these days. That's due to the change in the game. We don't have passers any more.

"On our poor nights we figure our defense will carry us. Consistency is our main theme, and we like to think that our game develops a clear, methodical kind of thinker.

"Our man has a good reason for everything he does on that court. He does nothing on impulse; he follows his mind's good reasoning.

"Here is our prevailing motto: 'Think and then act. Never act, and then alibi.'"

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why are the U.S. Constitution and the Declaration of Independence kept in helium-filled glass cases?

A—Helium, an inert gas, protects the documents from atmospheric dangers. The documents are written on sheepskin parchments, which would be subject to attack by gases in air, damage by light or by humidity or dryness in air. The glass cases have special filters to protect the parchments from damage by ultraviolet radiation from light.

Q—How many of our presidents had no children?

A—Six—Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Harding, and Buchanan, the latter a bachelor.

Together they create quite a stir.

Where the Money Comes From—Major State Tax Sources

Among the larger state tax sources are: general sales, personal income, corporate income, motor fuel, tobacco and alcoholic beverages. Together, these six sources brought in $17 billion in 1964. The map shows that 19 states have at least one of these three: corporate income, personal income or general sales. 23 have all three; 15 have two each and 11 have one of the three. Nebraska levies on motor fuel, on tobacco products and alcoholic beverages, but not on the other three sources. The figures in each state show the 1963 per capita taxes.

The State Reorganization Commission of Missouri

THE CENTRAL MANAGEMENT AGENCIES (Con't.)

75. Recommendation:

That the function of the ex officio Board of Public Buildings be limited to the approval or disapproval of allocations of space made by the Division of Public Buildings.

This recommendation of the 1955 Commission calls attention to the responsibility of the Board of Public Buildings to generally supervise and manage state property located in Jefferson City. These responsibilities may be too encompassing for the board--the director may be able to discharge such responsibilities more rapidly and efficiently than the board.

The Board of Public Buildings still appoints and supervises the director. The board should be concerned with matters of policy, while the director should be concerned with providing the required building services.

At the present time there are several building services that should be provided. Some of these services are suggested by the following facts:

(1) There is no provision for common janitorial services. Each agency must hire its own custodian. Smaller agencies usually hire part-time custodians, who are seldom available during office hours for emergency or random chores.

(2) There is no provision for minor remodeling or redecorating as a common building service. Agencies must provide their own workmen. It is possible that some agency supervisors are not qualified to negotiate agreements with craftsmen.

• In general there is a host of building services required by all offices that could be more efficiently and uniformly administered the Director of Public Buildings than by the various agency supervisors. The director should provide these common building services.

ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES SECTION

76. Recommendation:

That an administrative services section be established within the Division of Budget and Comptroller, the head of the section to be appointed by the head of the division with the approval of the Governor. The section head should be trained in administrative management procedures, and together with all employees should be selected on the basis of professional qualifications.

The Administrative Services Section was recommended by the 1955 Commission. Unsuccessful legislation creating the unit has usually identified the proposed agency as the Administrative Management Unit. Regardless of the section's name, its potential contribution to efficient government administration could save many dollars.

Other sections of this report enumerate badly needed common services that should be performed by this section. Examples of these common services are: (1) forms control and standardization; (2) counsel and advice on data processing equipment and systems; (3) counsel on records management; (4) coordination of inter - office and inter- building communications; and (5) counsel on efficient use of duplication equipment. Many other duties could be listed.

Such a section is commonly found in organizations as large as Missouri's government. Services that are the common requirement of several operating departments can be more efficiently coordinated and supervised by a section specializing in such activities. Since the Administrative Services Section provides specialist - advisors to other departments, it is important to maintain a staff that is well qualified in management and administrative procedures.

The rapid changes in administration brought about by today's dynamic technological advances, make the establishment of a section of specialists necessary for maintaining administrative efficiency.

Many Tax Informers

By ADREN COOPER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 100,000 informers held the Internal Revenue Service each year by providing tips on people who haven't paid their taxes.

The IRS says many do so "from patriotic motivation or civic duty." A few get paid for it.

The number of persons providing such tips has grown steadily.

An IRS spokesman said the service doesn't solicit income tax tips but merely evaluates those that come in and follows them up if an investigation seems warranted. He noted that the FBI and other law enforcement agencies use informers routinely.

Only one out of every 10 tips results in even a preliminary investigation.

In the fiscal year which ended last June 30, the service collected $18.1 million as a result of tips compared with $12.7 million in the previous year.

The IRS paid $565,000 to 822 informers last year.

It has accepted tips for many years although the practice has been criticized by those who contend the informers are seeking revenge or perhaps are merely envious of a wealthy neighbor or employer.

A Congress member who heard from some of his constituents on the subject asked the service for an explanation.

A recently prepared memorandum from the IRS said:

"It is important to note that the number of persons who volunteer information and make no claim for reward is 20 times as great as the number who do claim rewards. It is reasonable to assume, too, that many of those who do not claim a reward, are impelled to furnish information from patriotic motivation or civic duty.

"On the basis of these factors, it seems questionable that the elimination of rewards will eliminate informing."

The IRS figures indicated that about 95,000 persons offered tips in fiscal 1964.

One IRS practice may deter quite a few would-be tipsters: Whenever a tip is received, the IRS investigates the informer as well as the tip.

By ADREN COOPER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 100,000 informers held the Internal Revenue Service each year by providing tips on people who haven't paid their taxes.

The IRS says many do so "from patriotic motivation or civic duty." A few get paid for it.

The number of persons providing such tips has grown steadily.

An IRS spokesman said the service doesn't solicit income tax tips but merely evaluates those that come in and follows them up if an investigation seems warranted. He noted that the FBI and other law enforcement agencies use informers routinely.

Only one out of every 10 tips results in even a preliminary investigation.

In the fiscal year which ended last June 30, the service collected $18.1 million as a result of tips compared with $12.7 million in the previous year.

The IRS paid $565,000 to 822 informers last year.

It has accepted tips for many years although the practice has been criticized by those who contend the informers are seeking revenge or perhaps are merely envious of a wealthy neighbor or employer.

A Congress member who heard from some of his constituents on the subject asked the service for an explanation.

A recently prepared memorandum from the IRS said:

"It is important to note that the number of persons who volunteer information and make no claim for reward is 20 times as great as the number who do claim rewards. It is reasonable to assume, too, that many of those who do not claim a reward, are impelled to furnish information from patriotic motivation or civic duty.

"On the basis of these factors, it seems questionable that the elimination of rewards will eliminate informing."

The IRS figures indicated that about 95,000 persons offered tips in fiscal 1964.

One IRS practice may deter quite a few would-be tipsters: Whenever a tip is received, the IRS investigates the informer as well as the tip.

Angry Teacher States Views In Full Page Ad.

WAYZATA, Minn., (AP) — Douglas Sarff, a high school teacher for 10 years, says the students of this Minneapolis suburb are "self-centered, frivolous and lead a slick, empty life" and he is fed up.

Sarff, 30, an English teacher in 10th and 11th grades at Wayzata Senior High School, paid $140 for a full page in a weekly newspaper to air his opinions.

Then he announced he had written to his school board several weeks ago that he did not want his contract renewed.

Donald Freeburg, also an English teacher at the high school said "most teachers expressed disbelief" that Sarff had the letter printed, and added that "a teacher with a family and other responsibilities just couldn't do it."

Roald Johnson, principal at Wayzata High School, would not comment on the letter. He said he thought Wayzata was little different from any other suburban school.

Sarff, a bachelor, said today, "I've saved up some money and after the current term ends in June I'm going to take my car, a tent and a few other things and travel into the Southwest and write a book. Not about the subject of this local tempest, or about suburbia, but a novel."

The ad in the Minnetonka Herald complained about the high school administration and parents of the community of about 3,500. Most of it, however, was directed at the high school seniors.

They are, he said, "frozen with sophistication" and "perpetuate the slick, empty modern living that is seen as its worst in this town."

"It is a shrill, hand-waving, convertible-riding round of trivialities, and for the young a blurred descent into oblivion, because, having exhausted its substance by age 17 and knowing nothing else, they become bored with themselves, with others, and with life," said the ad.

"I tell you, I have seen enough living death. I have been able to absorb everything else, attacks from all sides, the indifference of slow learners required to take my course, even being dropped back a step on the salary schedule last spring, but the petrification of a once-vital young person is a sight so ugly that all my senses reel from it."

Opinion in Wayzata was about evenly divided among those favoring Sarff's views and those opposing them.

A senior girl said, "You learn more from him in one day than you do from the other teachers in a whole year."

A senior boy, John Olson, said he thought the letter "was a lash-out before he slammed the door."

Sarff was graduated from the University of Minnesota 10 years ago, and taught at Winona and Wadena, Minn., before coming to Wayzata in 1960.

Income Tax Questions And Answers

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q-Is it true that students are allowed a double tax exemption?

A-In one sense they are. A full-time student filing his own return should claim one exemption for himself. If his parent provides more than one-half his support then the parent can claim a n exemption for him too, assuming the other tests of dependency are met.

Q-I have a question about the moving expense deduction. I moved in 1963 but the 39 week requirement was not up until 1964. Can I take this deduction on my 1964 return?

A-No. These expenses may be deducted only if they were incurred after December 31, 1963.

Q-My wife and I are separated. How do I file my income tax return and which tax table should I use?

A-You are considered married if there has been no divorce or legal separation by the end of your taxable year. You have a choice of filing jointly with your wife or filing separately. The way you file will determine which tax table to use.

Q-I worked for two employers last year. Where should I enter the excess Social Security tax withheld from my wages on the 1040 form?

A-If more than $174 of Social Security tax was withheld, the excess on line 17 a, "total federal income tax withheld", and add it to the amount withheld for income tax. Enter the total as a single item. Also, to the left of this total, write "excess F.I.C.A." and the amount.

Q-When I moved last year to take a new job, I had to sell my home at a loss. Can I deduct this on my tax return?

A-No. The tax law considers this to be a personal expense and not deductible.

Q-I am reimbursed by my employer for the business traveling and entertaining I do. Must I also report these business expenses and my reimbursements on my tax return?

A-If you account to your employer for these expenses, the expenses are equal to the reimbursement, and you do not deduct the expenses on your return, you need not supply a similar accounting with your tax return and the reimbursement need not be included. However, if your reimbursement exceeds your expenses, the excess should be reported as income.

Q-I've been told that if you are married you have to file a joint return to claim child care expenses. My husband had deserted me and can't be found, so I can't file jointly. Does that eliminate me from claiming this deduction?

A -- A 1963 law liberalized this provision to help deserted wives. The 1964 tax law further liberalized this provision to include husbands who pay for child care because their wives are incapacitated. Check your 1040 instructions for details on this provision. Form 2441 should be filed when this deduction is claimed. You don't have to be married to claim these expenses.

Q -- My wife and I adopted a child this past year. May we claim the lawyer's fees as a tax deduction?

A -- No. This is considered a personal expense. A legally adopted child, however, may be claimed as a dependent if the other necessary tests of dependency are met.

Q -- I've heard that the 1964 tax law made some changes in the rules on business travel expenses. What were they?

A -- The rule that transportation expenses must be allocated between business and non-business was changed so that it now applies only to travel outside the United States. The allocation rule applies when a taxpayer combines a business trip abroad with pleasure. Under certain conditions, the transportation expenses of the trip must be divided into business and nonbusiness portions and only the business portions may be deducted.

Q -- Is there any interest deduction for tuition payments when they are made on an installment plan and the carrying charge is separately stated?

A -- Under the new tax law, carrying charges on payments for educational services are treated as if they included interest. This would include tuition paid on installments. To figure the deduction take 6 per cent of the average unpaid balance during the taxable year in question.

Q -- Do my wife and I both have to be 65 to be able to deduct all of our medical expenses?

A -- No you don't. If either of you are 65 or over at the end of the tax year then all medical expenses for you and your wife may be deducted. In this situation the expenses are not subject to the 3 per cent limitation on medical expenses or the 1% limitation for medicines and drugs.

Q -- I saw a story in the paper the other day that some taxpayers were paying more than they should by using the wrong tax table. How can I be sure I don't do the same thing?

A -- The errors usually occurred when a married couple filing jointly using the tax table "D," which is for married couples filing separately. If you are married and filing jointly, and use the table, make sure the one you use is table "A".

Q -- There is no space on the 1040 form to list the names of my children. Should I put their names on a separate statement when I file my return?

Q -- The names of dependent children who live with you need no longer be listed on Forms 1040 or 1040A. Just enter the number of children you claim in the box provided. Dependents other than children living with you must still be identified by name and relationship.

Q -- My bank keeps asking for my Social Security number. Do they have a right to it?

A -- Yes they do. Congress passed a law in 1962 requiring individuals to supply their banks, savings institutions, corporations in which they own stock and other institutions from which they received interest or dividends with their tax account number. In most cases, this number is your social security number.

You must supply this number even though you may not be required to file a tax return and you are not covered by social security. If you are not covered by social security you can either obtain a social security number or apply for an identification number from the Internal Revenue Service.

Q -- What is the tax "blue" book?

A -- This is a publication titled "Your Federal Income Tax" which explains in detail the income tax law relating to individual taxpayers. It costs 50 cents and is available at Internal Revenue offices, or can be ordered from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

Q -- When my son was born I set up a savings account for him. I regularly make payments into it as I plan to use it for his college education. How do I report the interest from this account?

A -- If you have control over the funds, and can withdraw them at your own discretion, the income should be reported on your return, and your social security number should also be used to identify this account.

Q-- My wife and I meet the income qualifications for filing the 1040A. We have about $75 in dividends after the exclusion, but can't find a place on the form to take the dividend credit. Should we file a separate statement?

A -- If the dividend credit is claimed Form 1040 must be used, not Form 1040A.

Stuart Symington Reports from Washington

BECAUSE OF THE DIRECT EFFECT on prices paid for Missouri livestock, we are pleased by the continued reduction in the amount of beef imports. In calendar year 1964, imports totaled 1.3 billion pounds, as compared to 1.86 billion pounds in 1963 and 1.72 billion pounds in 1962.

Last year imports of beef and veal were equal to 6.7 percent of United States production, as compared to 10 percent in 1963, 10.5 percent in 1962, and 7.9 percent in 1961.

Of even more immediate interest is the fact that this year, imports are running two to three percent lower than a year ago.

The current reduction and that last year may account in part for a small increase in the price producers are receiving for choice cattle, about 10 percent over the same period last year. But there is cause for concern among cattle producers in the fact that there were 80.3 million head of beef cattle on U.S. farms and in the feedlots January 1, 1965, as compared to 79.1 million the preceding year and 75.1 million on January 1, 1963.

The Office of Education reports that Missouri ranks among the top states for the quality of work and the results under the Manpower Development and Training Act.

In an April 1 report, Missouri ranked 9th among the states in the number of Manpower Training graduates who have completed training since the start of the program in 1962, and 72 percent of these Manpower training graduates were in jobs.

One notable example of the effect of this training is in Sikeston. Dr. Harold Vogel, Administrative Assistant of the Public Schools notified me recently that of 116 formerly unemployed trainees in four fields of work, all but two have been placed into jobs. Their training was in automatic heat and refrigeration, building and ground maintenance, clerk-stenography and practical nursing. In addition, 21 auto mechanics have been trained. A new project in Sikeston of multi-occupation classes for 400 enrollees has now been approved.

Copies are now available of President Johnson's new legislative proposal for public works grants and other financial assistance to areas of long-term unemployment and underemployment. To be known as the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, the proposals combines features from Area Redevelopment, Appalachian Regional Development, and Accelerated Public Works programs.

The Bills, H. R. 6991, and S. 1648, have been referred to the House and Senate Public Works Committees.

At the present time, under the criteria in the proposed legislation, some 29 Missouri counties would be eligible for participation in this program.

It was an honor Sunday, April 4, in St. Louis, to receive the Herbert H. Lehman Israel award, given in the name of the late Governor of New York, United States Senator, and first Director General of UNRRA.

It was also a privilege to speak at the meeting of the St. Louis Research Council on April 2.

Missouri Press Report From Edward Long

Missouri farm people have found cause for concern in the proposed Federal budget sent to Congress earlier this year.

The proposed budget for fiscal 1966 provides for a slash of $20 million in soil and water conservation district assistance. District cooperators would be expected to make up the deficit by paying service fees into a Federal revolving fund. The fund would be set up to provide financing for the soil conservation program.

Charges to be billed to landowners would run up to 50 percent of the cost of technical assistance received by the districts.

The cut-back in Federal financing coupled with the heavy burden to be placed on farmers could well cripple the soil and water conservation program in Missouri. Letters protesting the proposed action have come into my office from nearly all of Missouri's 65 soil and water districts.

I have voiced my concern at the conservation budget cut in remarks prepared for use on the Senate floor. Also for the record of Senate proceedings, I cited a resolution adopted by the Missouri State House of Representatives, expressing a similar view of the matter.

Soil and water conservation districts in Missouri have made great strides forward in the important task of conserving our State's valuable neutral resources. Yet, an estimated eleven million acres of Missouri cropland is still subject to erosion, and some four million acres of flatland have drainage problems.

The work of the Soil Conservation Service deserves to be continued and encouraged, not crippled with a reduction in funds.

Any responsible efforts made in the Senate to restore adequate funds to the budget for the conservation program will include my strongest support.

Last week, I submitted testimony to a subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations urging passage of legislation almost identical to my Freedom of Information Bill.

The continuing problem of unjustified government secrecy keeps the spotlight on the need for an effective disclosure statute. More than fifteen Congressmen have introduced legislation touching on the subject of adequate access to government information.

Hearings on the Voting Rights Act of 1965 have filled the agenda of the Senate Judiciary Committee in recent days. Testimony given the Committee has revealed widespread support for the measure. It is expected that the bill will come up for consideration on the Senate floor within the next few days.

If the English word ends in 'ty' change the ending to 'dad' to form a Spanish word:

A) activity B) actividad C) ahk-tee-vee-DAHD

A) celebrity B) celebridad C) say-lay-bree-DAHD

A) opportunity B) oportunidad C) o-pore-tune-e-DAHD

A) necessity B) necesidad C) nay-say-see-DAHD

A) humanity B) humanidad C) oo-mahn-e-DAHD

A) possibility B) posibilidad C) poe-see-be-lee-DAHD

Just by changing 'ty' to 'dad' you own your English 'ty' ending words in Spanish. Doesn't it give you courage to know that you can convert all of these words to Spanish?

I am sure that now, when you hear or see words such as, 'doctor,' 'descripcion', 'pacifico,' 'actividad,' 'comico,' 'ambicioso,' 'artista,' 'presidente,' 'adversario,' etc., you will know that you own them in both languages; and that you have the verb "keys" to get to them -- 'quiero' (I want), 'puedo' (I can), 'tengo que' (I have to), 'voy a' (I am going, I am going to) and 'fui a' (I went).

You also know that if a Spanish word ends in 'AR,' 'ER' or 'IR,' it is the infinitive of a verb. Just remember that the Spanish verb endings, 'AR,' 'ER' and 'IR', form the infinitive, just as placing the preposition 'to' in front of a verb forms the infinitive in English.

Dear Editor:

I have before me an article by Walter Lippmann entitled "The Fifteenth Amendment". He started out by stressing the wording of the said amendment, quote: "forbids the denial or abridgement of the right of citizens of the United States to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

Now, this sort of brainwashing is just an example of why I think that voters must have a test to prove that they understand the U.S. Constitution before they can register.

A person who doesn't know much will conclude by this quotation that he should go along with the Federal Government (liberal) program in order to obey the constitution. A person who is poorly informed can be fooled so easily!

Now, I don't think there is any way that anyone can say that the Fifteenth Amendment came before our basic Constitution, which says that voting control is placed in the hands of the State Governments. The South is completely correct in their stand of States' Rights. Our forefathers wrote the Constitution like this to prevent us from falling into dictatorship!

A voting test, when applied in exactly the same form to whites as well as negroes, will in no way violate the Fifteenth Amendment, because the only discrimination would be on the basis of knowledge, and this would be equally applied to whites and negroes alike.

Sincerely,
George Spriestersbach

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My daughter-in-law lives by "the book." "The book" tells her it is the son's duty to write to his mother. I agree, but don't you feel there should be another chapter in the book saying if a son doesn't write to his mother (most sons are too busy making a living) it is perfectly permissible for his wife to write about the grandchild?

I can't be a cookie-jar-type of grandmother because I am a working woman with very little money and less time. Eight hundred miles separate me from my son and his family. So, please, Ann, publish this letter and perhaps other daughters-in-law will see it and take note -- even if my own daughter-in-law does not. - UNDER-PRIVILEGED GRANDMOTHER

Dear U. P.: I don't know what book your daughter-in-law is living by unless it's one she wrote herself. Rare, indeed, is the son who writes regularly to his mother. Usually the daughter-in-law gets the words down on paper and encloses the snapshots. In MY book this comes under the heading of being a good wife.

Perhaps your daughter-in-law hates to write letters. A telephone call every other Sunday (station-to-station at a mutually convenient time) could be the permanent solution to this problem -- and I strongly recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I tried for a scholarship and didn't make it. I did my best but my best just wasn't good enough. Both my mother and father have made me feel as if I am retarded or something. They asked me to explain why a friend of mine (they think he is a rockhead) got a scholarship and I didn't. My Dad said, "I just can't believe you aren't smarter than the dumb cluck. What happened?"

I realize it is normal for parents to want their children to be outstanding, but we can't all make it. Please say something to take the heat off. Students in Japan commit suicide over less. -- LOSER AT BATTLE CREEK

Dear Loser: There is entirely too much pressure on high school kids to excel, too much pressure to get into prestigious schools.

The student who does his best should not be made to feel like a failure. A grade of C may be more difficult for one student to make than an A is for another. I hold no brief for the goof-off who does poorly because he won't put forth the effort, but the kid who tries hard should be praised and encouraged.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you had a letter in your column from "Joe," a non-drinker who got fed up with people who tried to force liquor on him at cocktail parties. His solution (pouring the drink into the nagger's pocket) was a gutty one, but he was justified since people must protect themselves against boors as best they can.

Now, what can dieters do when the hostess keeps pushing food on them? One friend said to me last night, "Oh, I fixed the spaghetti and garlic bread just for you." (That's three pounds right there!)

Another friend always pleads, "Just taste it." Then she shoves the corn fritter under my nose. Of course that breaks down my resistance and I eat it.

Is there a solution -- short of doing a Mack Sennett and heaving the pie in the hostess' face? -- HELP

Dear Help: Yes. Eat at home and tell your friends, "Doctor's orders."

People who accept dinner invitations are expected to eat what the hostess prepares.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the boobytraps of teenage drinking, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cuts Post Office Funds

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General John A. Gronouski says "we'll have to pull in our belt" on postal service unless some of the House-voted cut in postal funds is restored.

He said in an interview today he was "shocked and awfully disappointed" that the House had slashed $69 million from his budget.

If the Senate doesn't come up with a healthy restoration, he said, "We'll have to pull in our belt somewhere, and with mail volume rising as it is, that's got to affect service.

"Something will have to give. I'll try to do it in the most inoffensive way possible — but if you don't have the money you have to look for a way to cut costs. This has an effect on service; you just can't be too gentle about it."

The House Appropriations Committee made the cut last week in approving a postal budget of $5,313,400,000. The full House endorsed the package Monday.

"I'm afraid I didn't make my point to the House committee well enough," Gronouski said. "I'm going to have to do better with the Senate next week."

Gronouski and other top postal officials expressed bafflement that the cut — most of which came under postal operations — could be made when congressional criticism of postal efficiency and morale is running so high.

It was a $9-million budget cut, an aide said, that caused Gronouski to curtail window and parcel post service last year, loosing an avalanche of public and congressional criticism.

"My problem is that I went in there with a budget pared to the bone," the stocky former Wisconsin tax official said. "The President insists that's the way we do it. It isn't like 10 years ago, when the Post Office Department went up there with a big fat budget to give the congressmen something to cut."

Gronouski wanted to hire 15,000 new workers to counter an overtime problem that has employes working 60-hour and 70-hour weeks.

The committee last week cut the number to 1,300, and thereby trimmed $10 million from the budget.

Amelia Earhart, U.S. aviation pioneer who flew the Atlantic in a solo crossing in 1932, was a military nurse in Canada during World War I and was for several years a social worker in Boston before taking up flying. She also made a number of long distance solo flights across the U.S. in an Autogiro, a forerunner of the helicopter. She was lost in the Pacific on an attempted global flight in 1937.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My daughter-in-law lives by "the book." "The book" tells her it is the son's duty to write to his mother. I agree, but don't you feel there should be another chapter in the book saying if a son doesn't write to his mother (most sons are too busy making a living) it is perfectly permissible for his wife to write about the grandchild?

I can't be a cookie-jar-type of grandmother because I am a working woman with very little money and less time. Eight hundred miles separate me from my son and his family. So, please, Ann, publish this letter and perhaps other daughters-in-law will see it and take note -- even if my own daughter-in-law does not. - UNDERPRIVILEGED GRANDMOTHER

Dear U. P.: I don't know what book your daughter-in-law is living by unless it's one she wrote herself. Rare, indeed, is the son who writes regularly to his mother. Usually the daughter-in-law gets the words down on paper and encloses the snapshots. In MY book this comes under the heading of being a good wife.

Perhaps your daughter-in-law hates to write letters. A telephone call every other Sunday (station-to-station at a mutually convenient time) could be the permanent solution to this problem -- and I strongly recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I tried for a scholarship and didn't make it. I did my best but my best just wasn't good enough. Both my mother and father have made me feel as if I am retarded or something. They asked me to explain why a friend of mine (they think he is a rockhead) got a scholarship and I didn't. My Dad said, "I just can't believe you aren't smarter than the dumb cluck. What happened?"

I realize it is normal for parents to want their children to be outstanding, but we can't all make it. Please say something to take the heat off. Students in Japan commit suicide over less. -- LOSER AT BATTLE CREEK

Dear Loser: There is entirely too much pressure on high school kids to excel, too much pressure to get into prestigious schools.

The student who does his best should not be made to feel like a failure. A grade of C may be more difficult for one student to make than an A is for another. I hold no brief for the goof-off who does poorly because he won't put forth the effort, but the kid who tries hard should be praised and encouraged.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you had a letter in your column from "Joe," a non-drinker who got fed up with people who tried to force liquor on him at cocktail parties. His solution (pouring the drink into the nagger's pocket) was a gutty one, but he was justified since people must protect themselves against boors as best they can.

Now, what can dieters do when the hostess keeps pushing food on them? One friend said to me last night, "Oh, I fixed the spaghetti and garlic bread just for you." (That's three pounds right there!)

Another friend always pleads, "Just taste it." Then she shoves the corn fritter under my nose. Of course that breaks down my resistance and I eat it.

Is there a solution -- short of doing a Mack Sennett and heaving the pie in the hostess' face? -- HELP

Dear Help: Yes. Eat at home and tell your friends, "Doctor's orders."

People who accept dinner invitations are expected to eat what the hostess prepares.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the boobytraps of teenage drinking, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cuts Post Office Funds

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General John A. Gronouski says "we'll have to pull in our belt" on postal service unless some of the House-voted cut in postal funds is restored.

He said in an interview today he was "shocked and awfully disappointed" that the House had slashed $69 million from his budget.

If the Senate doesn't come up with a healthy restoration, he said, "We'll have to pull in our belt somewhere, and with mail volume rising as it is, that's got to affect service.

"Something will have to give. I'll try to do it in the most inoffensive way possible — but if you don't have the money you have to look for a way to cut costs. This has an effect on service; you just can't be too gentle about it."

The House Appropriations Committee made the cut last week in approving a postal budget of $5,313,400,000. The full House endorsed the package Monday.

"I'm afraid I didn't make my point to the House committee well enough," Gronouski said. "I'm going to have to do better with the Senate next week."

Gronouski and other top postal officials expressed bafflement that the cut — most of which came under postal operations — could be made when congressional criticism of postal efficiency and morale is running so high.

It was a $9-million budget cut, an aide said, that caused Gronouski to curtail window and parcel post service last year, loosing an avalanche of public and congressional criticism.

"My problem is that I went in there with a budget pared to the bone," the stocky former Wisconsin tax official said. "The President insists that's the way we do it. It isn't like 10 years ago, when the Post Office Department went up there with a big fat budget to give the congressmen something to cut."

Gronouski wanted to hire 15,000 new workers to counter an overtime problem that has employes working 60-hour and 70-hour weeks.

The committee last week cut the number to 1,300, and thereby trimmed $10 million from the budget.

Amelia Earhart, U.S. aviation pioneer who flew the Atlantic in a solo crossing in 1932, was a military nurse in Canada during World War I and was for several years a social worker in Boston before taking up flying. She also made a number of long distance solo flights across the U.S. in an Autogiro, a forerunner of the helicopter. She was lost in the Pacific on an attempted global flight in 1937.

Fifth Graders Entertain Kiwanis

A fifth grade class of pupils of the Matthews Elementary School of Sikeston presented a musical program for the Kiwanis Club Tuesday night.

They were directed by their teacher, Mrs. Eula Underwood, and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Helen Loud Jones, Music Supervisor of the Sikeston Elementary Schools.

Their number consisted of a variety of folk songs in two-part harmony. A Swiss Mountain Song, "Spring Has Come," a French folk song, "Song of the Breezes" and a Polish tune "Bells Above the Chapel." Two songs were of Italian origin, the popular "Ciribiribin" and "O Song of Venice," and "Adelita" a favorite Mexican song.

Rhythm instruments, triangle, maracas, castanets, bells and rhythm sticks added to the melodic melody and tempo of the Italian and Mexican numbers.

A humorous song "Winky Tooden" whose words were written by the poet James Whitcomb Riley, had a definite lilting rhythm and marked accents.

The concluding number was "The Stars And The Stripes Forever." The flag was presented by a color guard. Then the group sang the stirring and appropriate words which have been set to this favorite march of John Philip Sousa.

Large Hail In Crowder

What is to believed to be the largest hail in this area in many years struck the Crowder and McMullin area yesterday around 3 p.m. The hailstones were described by a number of persons to be the size of hen eggs, damaged a number of rooftops, as well as breaking several windows in the Scott Central School. Fortunately the crop damage was very little in the three or four mile area, as the vegetation had not yet advanced far enough to be hurt very much.

By EDMOND LE BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House opens debate today on a $6-billion bill to give older Americans hospital care, low-cost medical insurance and bigger Social Security checks.

The measure, which carries benefits for some 20 million persons and higher taxes for most workers and their employers, is the biggest single enlargement of Social Security since the system was founded in 1936.

Further Tests To Be Made On Dying Fish

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — Don Kuester, a biologist for the State Conservation Commission, said Tuesday preliminary tests indicated that disease caused the death of about 40,000 fish in Washout Lake.

Kuester conducted the tests near New Madrid. He said ammonia from the aerial spraying of fertilizer was found in the lake water. But, Kuester said, there wasn't enough ammonia to account for the fish kill.

He said lab tests would be made in Jefferson City and a more complete report would be available in about two weeks.

William Lingle

William Lingle Given Grant At SIU

-- Southern Illinois University has awarded 59 fellowships in 26 fields of graduate study on the basis of academic records and recommendations.

Included in the list of winners is William M. Lingle of Sikeston, awarded a fellowship to do graduate work in English.

David Kenney, acting dean of the SIU Graduate School, said the fellowships go into effect with the fall term.

"There is strong competition for these fellowships, which assist financially with work on master's and doctoral degrees," Kenny said. "Numerous applications received here are first ranked by the departments in which students would do their study on the basis of scholastic records and letters of recommendation from their department heads and professors. Then they go through a final evaluation in the Graduate School."

Kenney said many of the students awarded fellowships are now attending Southern Illinois University as seniors or graduate students. Stipends the winners will receive vary from $ $180 to $220 a month. In connection with the fellowships the students will work ten hours a week. Their duties will be assigned by chairman of departments in which they will study for their advanced degrees.

Fifth Graders Entertain Kiwanis

A fifth grade class of pupils of the Matthews Elementary School of Sikeston presented a musical program for the Kiwanis Club Tuesday night.

They were directed by their teacher, Mrs. Eula Underwood, and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Helen Loud Jones, Music Supervisor of the Sikeston Elementary Schools.

Their number consisted of a variety of folk songs in two-part harmony. A Swiss Mountain Song, "Spring Has Come," a French folk song, "Song of the Breezes" and a Polish tune "Bells Above the Chapel." Two songs were of Italian origin, the popular "Ciribiribin" and "O Song of Venice," and "Adelita" a favorite Mexican song.

Rhythm instruments, triangle, maracas, castanets, bells and rhythm sticks added to the melodic melody and tempo of the Italian and Mexican numbers.

A humorous song "Winky Tooden" whose words were written by the poet James Whitcomb Riley, had a definite lilting rhythm and marked accents.

The concluding number was "The Stars And The Stripes Forever." The flag was presented by a color guard. Then the group sang the stirring and appropriate words which have been set to this favorite march of John Philip Sousa.

Large Hail In Crowder

What is to believed to be the largest hail in this area in many years struck the Crowder and McMullin area yesterday around 3 p.m. The hailstones were described by a number of persons to be the size of hen eggs, damaged a number of rooftops, as well as breaking several windows in the Scott Central School. Fortunately the crop damage was very little in the three or four mile area, as the vegetation had not yet advanced far enough to be hurt very much.

Highest point in development of letter-writing was achieved in England and France during the 17th and 18th centuries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House opens debate today on a $6-billion bill to give older Americans hospital care, low-cost medical insurance and bigger Social Security checks.

The measure, which carries benefits for some 20 million persons and higher taxes for most workers and their employers, is the biggest single enlargement of Social Security since the system was founded in 1936.

Further Tests To Be Made On Dying Fish

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — Don Kuester, a biologist for the State Conservation Commission, said Tuesday preliminary tests indicated that disease caused the death of about 40,000 fish in Washout Lake.

Kuester conducted the tests near New Madrid. He said ammonia from the aerial spraying of fertilizer was found in the lake water. But, Kuester said, there wasn't enough ammonia to account for the fish kill.

He said lab tests would be made in Jefferson City and a more complete report would be available in about two weeks.

William Lingle

William Lingle Given Grant At SIU

-- Southern Illinois University has awarded 59 fellowships in 26 fields of graduate study on the basis of academic records and recommendations.

Included in the list of winners is William M. Lingle of Sikeston, awarded a fellowship to do graduate work in English.

David Kenney, acting dean of the SIU Graduate School, said the fellowships go into effect with the fall term.

"There is strong competition for these fellowships, which assist financially with work on master's and doctoral degrees," Kenny said. "Numerous applications received here are first ranked by the departments in which students would do their study on the basis of scholastic records and letters of recommendation from their department heads and professors. Then they go through a final evaluation in the Graduate School."

Kenney said many of the students awarded fellowships are now attending Southern Illinois University as seniors or graduate students. Stipends the winners will receive vary from $ $180 to $220 a month. In connection with the fellowships the students will work ten hours a week. Their duties will be assigned by chairman of departments in which they will study for their advanced degrees.
